Where Milady Shops For Men's Gifts

Ten Commandments of Christmas Giving

- 1—Thou shalt not give wild neckties that causeth me to grow a beard to hide them.
2—Thou shalt not give that which is dolled up, fussed up, picoted or lace trimmed.
3—Thou shalt respect my taste for the fine above the flashy, the smart above the splashy, the genuine above the spurious.
4—Thou shalt, if thou art wise, select my gift from a man's store esteemed for integrity and quality—for verily as Browning says: 'What is the use of giving if by the lack of taste the gift falls to please?'
5—Honor my preference for things to wear but give me that which I will wear and swear by—not at.
6—Thou shalt not commit unto me—garish 'bargain sale' or tumbled-around gifts let loose on the holiday tide, thinking 'he doesn't know the difference,' for verily, such goods will be consigned to the regions below! (to the janitor or the furnace fire).
7—Thou needest not spend a fortune—for smartness representeth in finesse—not finance.
8—Thou shouldst bear in mind that the gift carries not only your 'Greetings,' but is also an expression of your own standards, therefore take care that the gift is a reflection of your taste—not on it.
9—Yea, if thou ponderest and 'what shall I give' chaseth and re-chaseth through the portals of thy brain, turn then to Livingston's and all's well.
10—Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's taste, nor his prophetic judgment in knowing just what to select, nor his repute for wisdom—for verily such a person selecteth at Livingston's. Go thou and do likewise!

GOOD PRESIDING OFFICER. Fire Prevention Service Has Warm Words Praise For Chief Armstrong. The Fire Prevention Service, published at Cincinnati, Ohio, has the following in its November issue: "The outstanding feature of the Fire Chiefs' convention, in New Orleans, as a convention itself, was the presiding of President James Armstrong. Chief Armstrong easily ranks as the best presiding officer which the International Association of Fire Chiefs has had. He knows how to despatch business. He uses good judgment in deciding what shall be hurriedly considered and what shall receive the careful consideration of the convention. He makes a valiant effort to keep the speakers on the subject. He makes himself heard throughout the convention hall. While maintaining order, he keeps the goodwill of all and makes it easy for any speaker to address the meeting."
