FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, Aug. 27.

In the South of France, a most horrid persecution has been raised against the Protestants.—Thousands having been slaughtered by the Catholics, who cloke themselves under the authority of the Duke D'Angouleme, who is acknowledged to be one of the greatest bigots of the age.

LONDON Aug. 30.

Extract of the Bulletin of Nîmes.

"On the 5th of July, several domains belonging to the Protestants, were burned, and on the 6th a still greater number. The Steward (Gouverneur) of the estate of Gérandin, was drenched over a fire. After his death they took him down and exhibited the body to passengers. The 7th, 8th and 9th, were more calamitous; they were only pillages. On the 10th, they massacred almost all the prisoners who were protestants. A pretended national guard, formed of all the infidels, and of all the worthless wretches of the encampments, and they too are accused of their crimes. One of the Captains is a prison of the name of Tuchon, a swearer of the streets, who alone has killed fourteen protestants. They broke open the grave of a young Protestant girl, to draw her into a common receptacle of filth. Those Protestants whom they do not kill, they exile, and throw into prison, in yet there were a great number of Royalists among them.

From the 10th to the 14th July, on our return from Paris arrived. On the 16th the King was proclaimed by the Urban Guard, (composed of men between 40 and 60 years of age,) followed by all the most respectable persons in the town, and the white flag was hoisted.

"On the 17th armed bands of brigands and the national guard of Berneuil came to disarm the military, who suffered an affray in the barracks, and they were almost all massacred. Their number amounted to 200.

"On the 18th, the people of Paris, who had made 300,000 houses prepared. On the afternoon of that cruel morning, the bad wretches ran about the town, calling out that they wished a second Saint Bartholomew.

"On the 19th, the Prefect published a Proclamation, recalling the peaceable persons who had quitted the town; they obeyed this order, and a great number were massacred.

"From the 20th to the 29th, the pillagers and assassinations did not desist. Those who fought their way in flight, were assassinated on the roads. Some were conducted into prison, where they are still groaning.

"On the 29th, the Prefect of the King arrived. The other Prefect had been named by the Royal Commissioner.

"On the 30th, a Te Deum was chanted, On the 31st another, and it published a very prudent proclamation, but he quitted Nîmes.

"On the 1st of August, M. de Calviere, the person who was the Royal Commissioner had named, refused the functions of Prefect, and 16 Presidents were installed. They went about telling them in their houses, and they eat their bread before their neighbours. Many were murdered in the fields. The night between the 1st and 2nd, was the most cruel. M. de Calviere caused an order to be pulled up, which seems to have licensed and aided these pretended Royalists. On the 3rd the royal troops were set on fire.

"The peaceable citizens, the Members of the Urban Guard, have been again forced to flee to save themselves from destruction. The Prefect sent an order to them, to return, under the penalty of having the laws respecting emigration put in force against them. Those who returned into the town, experienced either death or captivity. It is uncertain whether M. de Montcalm or M. de Calviere is most guilty of allowing or causing the commission of all those horrors; but suspicion lies principally on the former, who is Royal commissioner, and whom it is said the King had a considerable time ago ordered to cease his functions.

"Nothing promises any security to the friends of order; for all the authorities, with the exception of two persons are composed of the most timid and feeble men.

"The Attorneys, (Notaries) and the Advocates have formed resolutions not to retain or to receive into their bodies any but Roman Catholics.

"Nîmes has already left its rank among the commercial towns. It is on the brink of complete annihilation.

"The Prefect named by the King was a M. d'Arbier, but he has done no good. The foreign troops have been employed to force the brigades to march, and to let the true regiments.

they will render universally odious.

"The number of deaths is prodigious; we have not an exact enumeration.

"Horrors of the same kind are continued in the neighboring towns."

LONDON, Sept. 9.

Love and Madness.—An inquest was held at Portsmouth, on Friday week, by J. Grigg Esq. Coroner, on the body of Francis Colville, who died in consequence of taking a quantity of arsenic. The deceased, who was about 24 years old was a straw hat manufacturer and mantua maker, in that town. It appears that she received the address of a young man for some time; but he at length perceiving an irascibility of temper in her, which was uncongenial with his own, and with his views of future happiness, about 3 months since abandoned all his intentions concerning her, formed a similar connection with another young woman and a few days since was married. This last act, it would appear, unfeated the mind of the deceased, and she conceived a dreadful act of revenge.

On Thursday week, she purchased a penknife, and in doing so, requested to have one as long as possible. She then went to a neighbour's house, and sent a message to the young man to come thither, as a gentleman wished to speak to him. When he came, she said "I am going to London, will you drink with me?" He just tasted of the cup and returned it. She said "I wish it had been poison—I understand (she continued) you are married; are you not sorry for it?" He replied, No. Instantly she flung the penknife from under her gown sleeve, and made a blow at him, inflicting a deep wound in the shoulder. The knife was broken three parts off by the violence of the thrust; but with the remaining part she continued to strike at his head, until by his efforts, she was disengaged. She then left the house, proceeded to a druggist's shop, and bought a quantity of arsenic (under pretence that it was to poison rats) and went to her home, at Green's field, Greeneside. There she put the arsenic into a cup, filled it up from the panop, and drank the principal part of the contents. In a few minutes afterwards she informed her parents and neighbors of what she had done. Medical aid was sent for; but she had taken such a large quantity of poison, that it was found impossible to make her void the whole of it from her stomach; and at half past 5 in the evening she died.—Coroner's verdict—Lunacy.

LATEST FROM FRANCE.

By the slip Young Wasp, Capt Hawley, the editor received, last evening, French papers and letters from Bordeaux of the 12th September, of which the following are extracts:

Bordeaux, 12th Sept. 1815.

"Here are the articles of the treaty said to as they are called, which letters from Paris say is not to be published until the opening of the legislature.

"1.—The integrity of France confirmed according to the treaty of Paris.

"2.—The fortified places, except Strasburg, Metz, Lille, and Bâle, to be garrisoned by the allies.

"3.—Contribution six hundred millions, of which two hundred to the English, & the remainder to the other allies.

"4.—50,000 Prussians, 15,000 English, 50,000 Austrians, 15,000 Russians; together 130,000 men, to remain in France until the contributions are paid—the remainder to march off on the first of October.

"It is said the sovereigns of the Allies are to leave France on the 15th of this month.

"The people of France begin to think the Allies intend to spend the winter here. It is natural enough to suppose that the Russians would prefer remaining in France to returning home in the approaching season.

KINGSTON, NOVEMBER 18, 1815.

From the Raleigh, N. C. Star, Oct. 27.

War with the Creek Indians.

We have been favoured with the perusal of a letter from Colonel Clinch, to a gentleman in this city, dated Fort Johnston, Charleston, Oct. 22, which says, "from the last account from the Creek Indians, war with them is certain. Their force is estimated at 5,000, that is, including all parties."

ST. STEPHENE, Oct. 6.

In order to allay the public anxiety which has been for some time on tip-toe, relative to the result of the talk lately held with the Creek Indians at fort Jackson, we have taken considerable pains to get the most authentic information on the subject. By a gentleman of undoubted veracity, immediately through the nation, and who arrived here last evening, we learn that the conference had certainly broken up, without effecting its object. The Big warrior, and his party (who lately fought with the United States,) together with the several tribes who had been at war against us, have determined to oppose, to the extent of their means, the running of the line. The Big Warrior stated, that in either case, entire destruction to their nation was inevitable—that if they suffered the line to be run, their country would be limited to subsist by hunting, and that they had as well die by the sword as with famine—that they had been deceived—that his party had been promised pay as regular soldiers in the service of the United States—that their pay was now denied them—and that they felt it right in consequence, to hold possession of their lands. The Indians were moving off from the road, and shewed evident signs of dissatisfaction, though no hostilities or depredations have yet been committed.

A fish not recollect to have been before seen in our waters, supposed to be a Thrasher, was caught yesterday afternoon by harpooning, in Spermaceid dove, and brought up to the city by captain Cameron of the schooner Huckleback. Its extreme length is 16 feet, and circumference 6 feet. The Thrasher is said to be remarkable for its enemy to the whale.

Mor. Ado.

Remarkable Circumstance.—There is a woman now living near Miller's lane, in Manchester, with her fifth husband. She is in the 30th year of her age—and was a widow not more than nine weeks at a time—the last time she became a widow, it was only seven weeks. She has had 13 children—and what is more remarkable, she was mother of 5 children, all born alive and baptised, before she was 20 years of age!
