

LAW.

SHERIFF'S COURT, June 11.—Sir E. OWEN, K. B. &c. vs.—Holke, for criminal conversation with Lady O' Damages laid at £10,000—sterling. The defendant a son of Mr. H. an apothecary at Deal had suffered judgment to go by default; and the Jury were to enquire into, and assess the damages. Mr. Sergeant Beat stated the circumstances of the case. The crime was effected while Sir E. was absent on the Lakes in Canada, the defendant having been sent by his master to attend on Lady O. in quality of an apothecary. Soon after the return of the gallant Commodore, her Ladyship finding that an investigation was to take place, escaped from her husband's house with her paramour.—An old servant sent by Sir E. had said to the seducer, "Sir, you had better leave this lady: for Sir E. will soon be here."—"I don't care for Sir Edward," was the reply—"if he comes, I have pistols, and will shoot him." Admirals, Sir G. Young, Lord Keith, Scott, Sir W. Young, and Sir R. Lee, spoke in decided terms of the affectionate attachment which seemed to subsist between Sir Edward and Lady O. Mr. Brougham, on the other side, stated the Lady at between 30 and 40 years of age, and the defendant only 22; and thence inferred, that the seduction, in point of fact, must have been committed by the older party. The Jury retired for 20 minutes, and then returned with a verdict of £1500 damages for the Plaintiff.

PARIS, April 7.

"On the subject of the Evangelical mode of education, attempted to be introduced into France, the Mémoire of the 4th contains the following notice.

"By a letter of the 3d of February, the Grand Almoner has acquainted the Prefect of the Seine, that having made known to the King the alarms of the Catholics, on the plan of Bell and Lancaster, his Majesty had charged him to communicate the same to the Prefect, and at the same time to inform him, that without wishing to decide on the new method, his majesty was desirous that it should be laid down as a principle, both for establishments already made, and future ones—1. That the Catholic, Apostolic, and Roman religion, shall be taught in the new schools to the exclusion of every other.—2. That every teacher, who does not profess the catholic faith, shall be excluded from these schools.—3. That regulations for these schools shall be drawn up in concert with the diocesan authority.—4. That the rectors shall be authorized to visit the schools established in their parishes, and take care that the Catholic religion be there carefully taught.—5. In fine, that the establishments of the new schools shall in no respect trench upon those of the brothers of the Christian schools: and that in the places or parishes where the latter shall have been already established in sufficient number, new schools shall not be admitted to come into competition with them.

"These articles were sanctioned by his Majesty's signature, and, in consequence of their communication, those of the Clergy of Paris who were members of the Committee of Primary Instruction have no longer refused to act.

London, July 12.

An important caution.—Ladies who are accustomed to wear their dresses extremely low in the back and bosom, or off the shoulders, are particularly requested to beware of a person who has for some time past frequented all places of public amusement, and many private parties. He is an elderly gentleman, of venerable appearance and correct manners; his constant practice, when he observes a lady dressed in the manner above described, is, with an almost imperceptible and apparently accidental pressure of a little instrument which he carries in his hand, to imprint the following words upon her back or shoulder:—Naked, but not ashamed. The stain is like that produced by lunar caustic; washing will not remove it, and it becomes more visible by exposure to the air, so that nothing but a covering can conceal it. It is said that several ladies were marked last summer at various places of fashionable resort, and that they cannot, even now strip for company, without displaying this indelible badge of disgrace.

LONDON, Aug. 6.

Letters from Mahon, dated June 5, state that the Dutch have cannonaded the town of Algiers for several days.—The Americans have had no engagement there, though such a report was circulated. The damage observed to have been sustained by an American frigate which arrived dismasted in Sicily, was caused by a violent gale of wind. The true between the United States and the Barbary powers has expired, and notice has been given to masters that it may not probably be renewed.

PROLOGUE.

The noble fire which burns Britons' foes, incandescing on her Christian gloom,

Her golden boundless ocean, which supplies

For the removal in cold or burning states;

Lo! in the East, where British guiltiness pour,

And Mecca's Lord with thickening darkness baw,

Where is your custom cloth'd in terror reigns,

And Sape station forges baneful chains,

Where hope itself o' th' gloom is dead,

And the dark and dusky shades are spread,

Great Albion saith, the human race must rise,

To clear the soul-bitterness of these Omnipotencies,

Her mighty Vic'ry's point the gloomy sway

Or radiant reign to gain imperial sway,

But Art and Nature, like a lost,

Based at their call in vain, art, nature, lost,

Peace, liberty and justice, like the rain,

That wait on knowledge find this rich domain,

Dark superstition trembles at the sight,

Man's art shrinks and damps the hallowed light,

Now on the Earth alone does Britannia rule,

Her strong arm, like the Western soil,

For Science rising in the gloomy woods

Begins to dissipate the lowering clouds

And many proudly in her service glow,

As here we hope by aid of proof to show,

Today you find her rival course begun,

Yet much remains for some aspiring art,

Whose blithe soul from that desire known,

Whose glad gales for Wolfe bear a lasting crown,

Some general structure in these wilds to rear

When every art and science may appear.

Happy Grecs! this pack'd diamond too wool,

They quickly accept, back'd by ev'ry wise,

This new feelings too when you paid them a visit,

When learning's gates first open'd to thy view,

Did you to that wide mouth the thorny road,

Which leads to glorious Sciences sweet abode,

O think what honour pure shall bless thy name,

Beyond the fleeting voice of vulgar fame,

When King and haughty Victor cease to raise,

The secret murmur or the vocal praise,

Perhaps that name, when Europe's glories fade,

Shall often charm this Academic shade,

And hard-exclusion rough Ontario's shore,

We found a WELLERLEY and Joxes in Gore.

Kingston, SEPTEMBER 28, 1816.

FOR THE KINGSTON GAZETTE.

MR. PRINTER,

I was glad to see in your Gazette of Sept. 21st a number of Police Regulations for the town of Kingston, lately adopted by the Magistrates; and I heartily recommend to all my fellow-townsmen, to observe those salutary regulations, and to aid the commissioners in carrying them into effectual execution. So far, certainly, the Magistrates have deserved well. The tendency of these their measures will be to improve the town, and to remove and prevent common nuisances. There is, however, one other nuisance, more disgraceful and demoralizing than bad roads, slaughter-houses, swine running at large, or timber and stone lying in the streets. I mean the fracas and boxing matches, which so frequently assemble a rabble in the streets, to see a couple of quarreling blackguards, or perhaps of ill-bred boys, fighting and breaking the peace, amidst the clamors, and sometimes the plaudits of the spectators. Travellers, who have visited this town, in the course of their travels, have spoken of these vulgar exhibitions, as more common here, than in most other places.

The enquiry often made by them, is a pertinent one;—could not the magistrates and peace officers, by a spirited exertion of their authority, abate and prevent these, as well as other nuisances? By doing so, they would essentially subserve the interest of the town and indeed of the whole country. They have power enough to effect it. The laws on the subject are sufficient, if duly enforced; and well disposed inhabitants will aid and support any magistrate, in carrying those laws for the preservation of the peace into execution. A degree of vigilance, and perhaps even of rigor, in this respect, would be peculiarly favorable, at the present time, when efforts are made to introduce new regulations of Police, for the comfort quiet and improvement of the town. Whenever such an affray, then, takes place hereafter, let any person who happens to be present make a regular complaint to some Magistrate; and let the offender be bound over to the proper court, and suffer such punishment as shall be found sufficient to suppress the wicked practice.
