

Poetry.

The Leaf.

[From a late writer, who was distinguished no less by his talents than by his piety.]

We all do fade as a Leaf.

Isa. lxiv. 6.

See the leaves around us falling,
Dry and wither'd to the ground;
Thus to thoughtless mortals calling,
In a sad and solemn sound:

Sons of Adam, once in Eden,
Blighted when like us he fell,
Hear the lecture we are reading,
'Tis, alas! the truth we tell,

Virgins, much, too much, presuming
On your boasted white and red,
View us, late in beauty blooming,
Number'd now among the dead.

Gripping misers, nightly wailing,
See the end of all your cares;
Fled on wings of our own making,
We have left our owners bare.

Sons of honour, fed on praises,
Fluttering high in fancied worth,
Lo! the fickle air, that raises,
Brings us down to parent earth.

Learned sops, in systems jaded,
Who for new ones daily call,
Cease, at length, by us persuaded,
Every leaf must have its fall!

Youths, though yet no losses grieve you,
Gay in health and manly grace,
Let not cloudless skies deceive you,
Summer gives to autumn place.

Venerable sires, grown hoary,
Hither turn the unwilling eye,
Think, amidst your falling glory,
Autumn tells a winter night.

Yearly in our course returning,
Messengers of shortest stay,
Thus we preach this truth concerning,
"Heaven and earth shall pass away."

On the Tree of life eternal,
Man, let all thy hope be staid,
Which alone, for ever vernal,
Bears a leaf that shall not fade.

Christianity in India.

The daily increase of pious officers in the army in India, and the truly laudable manner in which some of them employ their talents and influence, are things calculated to afford pleasure of the most refined nature to the lovers of truth. The cold face of infidelity is now seldom, if ever met with, and not a few in the army are the warm and judicious friends of the Gospel. Many of them being persons of liberal education, and well acquainted with the languages of India, are capable of rendering great service to the cause of Christianity. By letters from various quarters, it appears that some engage in translating parts of the Holy Scriptures; others in correcting former versions; some assist in superintending the education of native children; others liberally contribute to their support; some illustrate the history and customs of the countries around them by their writings, and thus furnish a collateral auxiliary to the spread of Divine knowledge; others encourage the instruction of the children of European soldiers. Some take the lead in Bible Associations; others have several schools, taught under their own personal inspection, and supported solely by themselves and their families. There is one instance in which three schools, consisting of 300 children, are superintended by an English officer. We cannot but observe with delight, pious ladies also, the wives of these officers, employing their talents in writing useful tracts and books for children—engaging in the superintendence of native schools, and schools of industry, as well as visiting the cottages of the poor, and endeavoring to conduct them to the knowledge of Jesus Christ.

To persons who are anxiously observing the progress of Christianity in India, these circumstances are of no ordinary interest; and the Minister or Missionary, who has such useful coadjutors planted around him in the scene of his labours, may truly say—The lines are fallen to me in pleasant places.—The Indo-Chinese Gleaner.

To Die.—Ah solemn scene, yet sure! nature recoils at the gloomy thought, and fain would pass it over. The tyrant may forget the object of his revenge, the parent her smiling offspring, and man his God, but death remembers man must die. Our lot remains unchanged, our doom fixed. Earthly splendor is no exemption from his shafts; youth and beauty must obey his mandates. To day in health, to-morrow "food for worms." The tender ties of earth cannot prolong our stay; the tear of partial fondness, conjugal affection avail not; the tide of life spent, we must depart to worlds unknown.—The pillow of disease is the moment of reflection; we then cast a retrospective eye on improprieties in time past; we bid them not welcome; the intruders fix on our minds, and torture our departing spirits.—View this picture, ye giddy triflers; ye fashionable libertines; cease to mock Omnipotence. In the last dread conflict friends may wish in vain; Nature's struggle's lost: Death is conqueror still—reflect—reform.

The accounts of the diabolical conduct of Lord Byron to his wife, floating on a general tide of scandal, were not generally in this country considered worthy of credit; but the worst of them has recently been mentioned on an authority that cannot well be doubted.—After the marriage ceremony, and when the parties were seated in the carriage, Lord Byron, observed the tears usually shed on leaving the paternal mansion filling his lady's eyes, said, "Spare your tears, lady Byron. you shall soon have better cause to cry. I married you not out of love, but hatred. You once dared to refuse me; and I have linked myself with you for the sake of revenge." And yet this man, whose love was turned into hatred because of a refusal, seeks refuge among the mountains of Switzerland, to avoid the wickedness of his fellow-creatures!—Glasgow paper.
