

Poetry.

The following lines, taken from an English gazette of much celebrity, are republished as containing a deserved censure on those lecturers whose ferocious severity in trifles, rather tends to provoke ridicule, than to ferve the cause of religion or morality.—N. Y. E. Post.

From the London Literary Gazette.

LINES,

On hearing that the Mayor of Bath had been requested to exert his authority and prevent shaving on Sundays!

Thou shalt not shave on Sunday; to be saved,
None must henceforth shave others, or be shaved;
No mortal shall be found, when shutters close,
To take his fellow mortal by the nose;
No man of suds must let a stranger in,
Or pass unholy razors o'er his chin;
Spread filthy laher on the Sabbath day,
Or scrape a weeks unseemliness away.
Should swain or barber mara six day's growth
Upon the seventh—rain seize them both—
And doubtless, by some newly garbled text,
Washing and combing will be sinful next,
Whilst evils so minute our minds engage
In virtue, this must be a golden age!
Or is it flimsy leaf, which thinly spread
O'er mere externals, gilds an age of lead?
Whilst they preserve such sanctity without,
Are men more pure in deeds, and more devout?
Do they on show alone these cares bestow?
Or have they "that within" which passes show?
Oh! impious question; oh! most naughty doubt!
Their sanctity can ne'er abide without;
Their love of Sunday beards, their dread of sin,
Are kindred emanations from within;
All are, in truth, as pure as they appear,
And every thing is gold that glitters here;
So much they strive to purify the heart,
They scorn to purify a carnal part;
They play with untriumph'd sanctity of face,
And e'en their very beards must grow in grace;
Each holy hair demands a world's applause,
Hairs left to flourish in a blessed cause;
And midst those beards, when every razor rests,
Small birds of paradise shall build their nests.
If any doubt them, look around and view
Their systems, and their reformations too!
New schemes, new schools, new lights, new sects
Are a'!

New paths of peace; new short cuts to the skies;
New doctrines to each scripature text belong,
And all we once thought right, is reckon'd
Wrong!

Elegiac Stanzas on the death of General Brock.

BY MR. UPTON.

The laurel of glory eternal shall bloom,
Triumphant, and branch o'er the warrior's tomb!
O'er the patriot, that battled his country to save,
The laurel of glory shall circle his grave!

Nor climate, nor season, nor time's iron hand,
E'er injure or sap it in Britain's proud land;
O'er the names of the soldier for ever shall wave
The laurel of glory, the meed of the brave!

Nor envy, nor faction's fell venom be seen
To wither a leaf of its beautiful green!
Like the life-bud of Spring, shall new verdure
E'er find,
And wave o'er the worth of the hero enshrin'd!

Tho' age after ages may moulder away,
The fame of the patriot can never decay!
Like the oak of the forest, each tempest can
Have,
And the laurel of glory wave over his grave.

and placing it in a covered mug with a quart of cider for ten hours or more, in a very warm ashes heat, about as much as we use to draw tea—a little scalding of the corks, at the moment they are to be used, will soften them, so that they will fit better and be more readily driven in.

But it would be needless to expect cider to be made good by bottling, it must be pure and well flavored whilst in the cask; and therefore the subject necessarily involves cider making, on which you have many excellent papers. From what I understand of the making of cider, it appears that the later the apples hang on the trees the more powerful will be the cider; hence the cider of France and other temperate countries is said to be more powerful than ours; our summer apples, therefore, would not make good cider for bottling, because of their quickly arriving at perfection.

The cleaning of the liquor from the pumice is the main thing, when good found late apples are used. It appears that cider made from sweet apples is much more apt to abound with pumice, whilst the acid and astringent retain their pumice in the press, hence some very bad eating apples make excellent cider. The attention to this subject, i. e. the defecation, is all important, especially the first separation for if the first is well timed and complete, the future fermentations will be moderate and the racking effectual. Blankets have been used with success to get off much of the pumice; they should be spread on the bottom of a flat basket, and that placed on the head of the cask. All strainers will require often washing out, and therefore two or three are necessary, all of which may be made from one stout blanket. But I am satisfied that a few hair sieves of different fineness, with the coarsest uppermost, placed under the run, would separate great quantities of pumice; they would also require shifting with a second set, and constant attendance to wash them out; the size of grainy sifters would answer, after these the blanket strainer would render the cider so pure, that the fermentation would be gentle and easily managed for racking, so that the first racking and the fining would finish the fining.

Your's,
SILVANUS.

P. S. Some persons are very much pleased to see cider rush out of the bottle like small beer, they think it strong; if they bottle it themselves they will find their mistake, and, like me, be better pleased to see a kind of sparkling fervor, like the wine of Solomon, "that moveth itself aright."

Aphorisms for Young, Unmarried Ladies.

If you have blue eyes you need not languish
If black eyes you need not leer.
If you have pretty feet, there is no need to wear short petticoats.

If you have good teeth, do not laugh less than the occasion may justify.

If you have pretty hands and arms, there can be no objection to your playing on a harp if you play well.

If they are disposed to be clumsy, work tapetly.

If you have a bad voice, rather speak in a low tone.

If you have the finest voice in the world never speak in a high tone.

If you dance well, dance but seldom.

If you dance ill, never dance at all.

If you laugh much or little, never laugh boisterously.
