

Poetry.

The Glow-Worm to the Moon.

By the Author of Legends of Lampido-sa, &c.

Merrily shine, sweet moon, with me,
To cheer the traveller's lonely way!
Merrily shine, for I, like thee,
But for a passing season stay.

Shall we not lend, while thus we rove,
My diamond dart and thy silver bow;
Thou in the sapphire vault above,
I in the emerald fields below?

They who linger and waken yet,
To gaze on me or thy wand'ring beam,
Are frail themselves as the lights that lit
From me and thee on the glassy stream.

Thou art, like them, of earthly frame,
Ting'd with a light from purer spheres,
That on thy desolate darkness came
And coldly shines through a clime of tears.

And they are like me, unfix'd and brief,
Guests of the cold and shadowy hour,
That dwell in the mists of doubt and grief,
Or stray from perishing flow'r to flow'r.

And we, the glow-worm and wand'ring moon,
Have shadows such as the joys they chase;
Such vapours mock me in midnight's noon,
Such films steal over thy pale bright face.

O!—let them learn, like us, to deck
The darkest hour of their little reign!
Let them glide like thee, through the wild
clouds' wreck,
Or frolic with me o'er tower and plain.

Shall they not learn from us to scorn
The vapours that haunt this summer-night?
Let them wait like us for its golden morn,
And blend with the world of living light!

Merrily stay, sweet moon, and shine
While wanderers keep their jubilee;
The light of the world is mine and thine,
And Man, its master, is slave to me!

AGRICULTURAL.

FROM THE AMERICAN FARMER.

Near Frankfort, Ky. 8th November.

MR SKINNER,
We are still without rain—such a drough was never known here. I nevertheless believe the crops, in this county, will be but little short of a medium crop—mine is fully one.

Have you in your county the dreadful malady which affects the horses in this state, and in the state of Ohio as far as I can learn, and which, in many places, has been extended to the cattle and hogs?—I mean the sore tongue. It commences with white blisters on the tongue—it becomes raw in a few hours, and extends to the mouth and lips—a great deal of saliva is discharged—the horse, if not relieved, becomes incapable of eating—the tongue rots off, and death ensues. It is attended with fever and costiveness. It is generally believed to be contagious, although it is admitted that some horses have not taken the complaint, that have been fed with those that had it, and many have taken it that have never been so exposed. It is considered completely within the power of ordinary remedies if applied in time, and the horse not used hard—purgatives are used by some—bleeding by others—but generally some astringents to cleanse the mouth, &c.—alum, salt-petre, coporas, vinegar, decoctions of oak bark, of the root of the iron weed, &c. &c. are used by many, the three former most generally. The power of those three, and astringents, separate or combined, have been tried on the bit of the bridle as a preventive, and used with success. As soon as I heard it was in this neighbourhood, I took measures to keep my horses from those that had it, and to have them regularly fed and salted. I have so far escaped, but this may be for a time only.

This disease was in this state and Tennessee in 1801 and 2. I was travelling and my horses had it, but it was not as general nor as virulent in its symptoms as this year. I then heard of no fatal cases. Is this disease prevalent in other parts of the Union?

More of the Sore Tongue.

Symptoms, Effects, and cure.

We have already published, on this subject, an extract of a letter from a gentleman in Kentucky, describing this distressing malady, as it prevails in that state, with an account of the mode of treatment which has usually been found effectual—a receipt to cure it, taken from the Federal Gazette has also been inserted in the Farmer—we now subjoin some further notice of the complaint, deeming it useful to record such matters, in a repository, such as this paper affords—to which reference may be had, whenever occasion may hereafter require it.

Editor of Am. Farmer.

Mr. Skinner,—Agreeably to your request, I send you some observations which I have made, while examining several horses affected with that foul and often fatal complaint, called the Sore Tongue.

The complaint I believe made its first appearance here, the fall past, and has become very prevalent. It doubtless is contagious.

The first symptoms which characterize this disease are a fetid breath, slobbering and a disposition to drop its food immediately after the first attempts at mastication.

In the course of from one to three days from the commencement of these symptoms, the tongue, high up in the mouth, will be found, on examination, entirely raw. The breath of the animal becomes at this stage of the disease extremely fetid.

At this time the creature generally refuses to eat or drink, but when it retains a disposition for either, the mucus necessary for deglutition are paralytic or so sore, that the animal refuses to will them into action. The canker continues to spread until it pervades the whole surface of the tongue: the cheeks and lips become swollen; and notwithstanding the most rigorous perseverance in the use of those means which have heretofore been suggested or prescribed, often terminates in gangrene and mortification of the tongue. Thus many poor emaciated animals fall victims to this loathsome disease.

A remedy which could be uniformly relied on as a cure for this fatal malady would be truly acceptable to the public.

From, Dear Sir, your friend,
and very humble servant,
DAVID E. BROWN.

Union, Loudoun County, (Va.)
December 7, 1819.

EXTRACT.

On the 7th of the present month, there were seven cows taken ill; on the 9th, I was requested to visit them, and I found the disease to be the prevailing epidemic, I directed the mouth wash to be used twice a day, and ordered that they should be kept in the cow stable that night and in the morning the overseer to notice how they were as to the state of their bowels, the information was, that they had all passages returned to a healthy state, twice administered is generally enough. I have the pleasure to hear that they are all able to take their food, and are fast recovering. On the same farm with the cows there are several horses, one of which has the disease; on another farm, there are seven horses, five have the complaint, but not one of the cows, (although there are a number on the place.) In a livery stable that has 29 horses, three have had the disorder, these three stood in different parts of the stable, but not one that stood on either side of these horses has taken it; in another case the owner told his boy to take from his horse which had the complaint, the food that was in the manger and throw it away, the horse, had attempted to eat and had flabbered in it, under the influence of economy, the boy gave it to the cow, she did eat it; when this came to be known by the owner, he was a little wroth expecting his cow must have taken the infection, about three weeks has elapsed, but the cow continues well, although nothing was done to prevent the infection taking effect. I think the above facts sufficient to prove the disorder neither contagious or infectious; we have no proof that the want of rain has produced it, because in Baltimore and its vicinity, every animal has, or might have had its usual supply of water; should it be admitted that the feed being defective, produced the cause, I am unable to account for so few having the complaint in the stable above stated, and the whole 29 horses being fed with the same hay and grain and breathing the same atmospheric air, that 26 of the above number should escape the infection, while the other three have finally recovered remaining in the same stable! Had the disease been confined to the state of Kentucky, it would be evident that the hot and dry season we have had, was the cause as in some parts of that state, the inhabitants have had to drive their cattle forty miles to water— from the above facts I believe you will agree with me, that the cause of the above disease is enveloped in mystery.

I am sir, yours,
and the public's humble servant,
JOHN HASLAM, V. S.

Baltimore, 20th Dec. 1819.

The following is an extract from Mr Haslam's communication which was published in the daily newspapers, and contains his receipt for the cure of the Sore Tongue.

The first symptom that some horses show is pain in the act of swallowing; this is when the disease commences in the throat. In others it begins nearer the end of the tongue, and in these, the first symptom is a willingness to eat, but unable on account of the pains; with considerable slobbering of adhesive saliva—on looking into the mouth the tongue will be blistered, or the blister may have come off and the tongue appear extremely sore. In some cases the lips and cheeks swell, but if no other symptom should appear, the disease is not alarming, but will give way to the mouth wash.

In some subjects of its attack the system becomes more generally affected—the horse is feeble; his pulse low, and instead of forty, not more than thirty-four pulsations in a minute. An obstruction in the bowels; i. e. the horse may not have more than one or two passages, or perhaps none through the night; when these symptoms appear, give him according to his size, a pint or three half pints of raw flax seed oil, or one bottle of castor oil; if in twenty-four or thirty hours after it is given, it should not begin to operate, it must be repeated—let him drink as usual. The best feed is chopt rye, shorts or bran made into a slop—if he will not take this, scald oats that they may be soft to his mouth—some will eat hay, rather than any other food.

The wash I use is alum and salt petre, each one ounce—vinegar, a pint—honey, half a pint—the mouth to be cleaned two or three times a day with a swab dipped in the mixture, introducing it as far up the mouth as convenient—in some cases I have taken blood, but could not perceive that it produced any effect.

The situation of the Island will show it is particularly adapted to pasture. It abounds with fish & wood of almost every kind, a considerable proportion of which is oak.

For further information, application to be made to the undersigned, at Bath—and for undisputed titles to the Hon. Sir John Johnson, in Lower Canada.

D. FARLEY.

December 28, 1819. 53f

THE subscriber feels it his duty, from the villainous treatment he has received, to guard the public against any imposition on the part of Mr Solomon Johns, by his offering to sell any part of half an acre lot, with buildings thereon, in the village of Ernest Town, bounded on the east by the Farmer's Store, and on the west by the property of the heirs of the late John Davy, as any title to the said property held by him was fraudulently obtained by a surrender of a bond that was in my own name for the purchase made of it in 1806, when Johns was at low wages, and as can be made appear evidently by various proof taken at the time of the examination of his transactions in 1812—had no shadow of a claim.

The person who is stated to hold a Bond for a Deed for half the above property from Johns, was acquainted with my just pretension in the first instance, but any thing to answer the purpose.
