DRY GOODS

THE Subscriber begs leave to remind those who are in his debt, that the Harvest is approaching, and that consequently it is an object of peculiar interest with him to collect

His out-standing MONIES.

If they will give the matter a little consideration, they will find their interests are identified with his, for reason will point out to them, that the quicker they liquidate his demands, the quicker the money will return into their own pockets, with additional profit.

Money hoarded in a Chest is of no benefit to the World, it confers no good upon any one, not even on its proprietor;

whereas if it be quickly circulated, it inspires life and vigor in its continued round, and increases the property of all who are lucky enough to finger it as it flies!

The Subscriber trusts that he need say no more to induce his customers

To flock in with their money, and should there be any among them who are through unavoidable misfortunes, unable to pay, they have only to step forward and convince him of it, and he will freely give them a full discharge from his claims, and more cheer to help them on again in the World, trusting they will be more fortunate in future.

With every kind wish to his customers, and the strongest desire to promote by his humble endeavours their prosperity and happiness, (which he can only do by getting punctually paid), he has the honour to remain,

Their grateful and obedient Servant, THOMAS DALTON.
