

visit to the Falls. We understand that the Frontenac will now be laid up for the season.

Our Steam Boats have of late been truly unfortunate. In addition to the catalogue of disasters already noticed, we have to state that the Toronto ran aground last night, in coming up from Prescott, but was got off without sustaining any material damage.

The following extract from the New York Enquirer, will give our female acquaintances a little insight into "Life in New York."

WINTER PARTIES.

The fashionables are about returning to town from their summer excursions and country residences. Every thing is in preparation for a winter campaign. Carpets newly laid—curtains festooned—new candelabras and mantel ornaments purchased—the piano new tuned—scores of Italian music procured, and all the paraphernalia of festivity arranged according to the London and Paris beau monde.

MRS. SIMPKINS At Home. Dec. 10. An Answer—Quadrilles at 10.

The issuing of these cards pre-supposes a grand supper. A mere simple invitation or note is adopted for a private soiree. Now, on the threshold of all these preparations are these only one piece of advice, which we hope our male and female convivia will take from us in good part, and that is, not to eat themselves to death, according to custom.

The next in order, after a formal interregnum of the minutes, are waiters filled with peaches, apples, pears, and fruits of various kinds; these are followed in quick succession with sauzaves, lemonade, and wine. Ladies move towards the piano and gentlemen to the card table.

We advise a judicious curtailment in these hospitable arrangements in civility to the health and long lives of our estimable young ladies, and in order that they may not by these excesses cut short a career rendered desirable by the charms of beauty and accomplishments.
