

THE MERCY SEAT.

BY THE REV. HUGH STOWELL. From every stormy wind that blows, From every swelling tide of woes, There is a calm, a sure retreat, 'Tis found beneath the Mercy Seat.

DUNDAS AND THE BARBER.

Before Henry Dundas, afterwards Lord Melville, had obtained the patronage of Scotland, he was not very popular with the natives of that country; indeed, the inhabitants of the gude town of Edinburgh, at one time sought his life, and would have sacrificed him to their fury for having been concerned in certain measures to which the general opinion was opposed.

In this state of the public mind, he made a visit to the Scottish capital, and being one day recognized walking on the North Bridge, or Mound, he was surrounded by an immense mob, who hustled him in a very rude manner, and made preparations for throwing him over the parapet. Luckily, he happened to have a considerable sum of money in his pocket, in the shape of notes and silver, which he had the presence of mind to throw, alternately, among them, so as to divert their attention, whilst he made all possible way for the mansion of the Lord Provost; where, after great difficulty, and having disposed of his last shilling, he arrived and found refuge and protection.

The mob increased, however, and surrounded the Chief Magistrate's house, crying vehemently, "Put out Dundas! put out Dundas!" and behaved otherwise in a very riotous manner. At length the Provost, fearing they would proceed to extremities, came out and addressed them on the duties of hospitality, and on the ancient and uniform character of the Scots for the exercise of that virtue; and concluded by saying, "he himself would prefer killing a victim to their fury, rather than see any person who had sought the asylum of his roof." This was an appeal which no Scotchman could withstand, more particularly as it came from a man whose amity of character and mild disposition had rendered him generally beloved. Having given the Provost three cheers, they quietly dispersed to their houses.

Whilst he remained in Edinburgh on this occasion, Mr. Dundas took care not to show himself again in the streets, but soon took his departure for London. Soon afterwards, being obliged to revisit his country, and knowing the storm to have blown over, he met with a very odd adventure, but one which verified him equally, if not more so, than on the North Bridge. It seems that he had been recently necessary to some other obnoxious measure, and, however, of such general importance, as to excite the public feeling, though not sufficient to blow it into actual flame. In this state of things he arrived at a hotel in Edinburgh, and next morning sent for a barber to shave him.

The Tutor, who happened to be a wag, on entering the room, saluted Mr. Dundas and welcomed him to Edinburgh. Then he began to lather his face; during which operation, he cast upon him sundry scowling and penetrating glances, the meaning of which the stranger could not well comprehend. At length, finishing his razor, he said in a sharp and stern voice,—"We are much obliged to you, Mr. Dundas, for the part you lately took in London."

"What!" replied the Secretary, "you are a politician, I find? I sent for a barber." "Oh, yes," returned the Knight of the pewter basin, "I'll shave you directly;" which he did until one half of the beard was clearly mowed, when, coming to his throat, he drew the back of the razor across it, saying, "Take that, ye traitor!"—and off he ran, down stairs into the street. Whether Mr. Dundas had previously felt any uneasiness at the barber's manner, we know not; but the latter expression—the action being so well suited to the word—induced him instantly to apply the apron to his throat, and make a loud gurgling noise, which being heard by some of the people of the house, they immediately ran to his assistance. They soon discovered, by the paroxysmic gestures of Mr. Dundas, what had occurred, and it was not long before the room was full of members of the Faculty, of all degrees: apothecaries, surgeons, and physicians! It was a considerable time before the patient could be prevailed on to remove the apron and expose his throat; but at length when he did so, with much caution—it was found to be in a perfectly whole state; there not being even a scar visible!

PACKETS, for Steerage Passengers only, to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New York.

The ships composing this line are all of the first class, copper-fastened and coppered, of about 400 tons burthen, and as fast sailors as any packets in the trade. The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay & expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a transient vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support, as will ensure its continuance and success. To Irish Emigrants this line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish ports and Liverpool, by means of steam-boats and smacks, and to all it will extend the peculiar advantage of a connexion with respectable companies upon the Hudson River and the New York canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.
