

STANZAS.
FORGET me not, though now we part,
Nor let our parting grieve thee;
But trust the firmness of a heart,
That will not—cannot leave thee!
When first we met, thy playful look
Bespoke a heart of lightness,
And shamed the lilies of the brook
For purity and brightness:
But now 'tis changed:—a passing cloud
Hath thrown its shadows o'er thee;
And all is mantled in a shroud,
Around thee, and before thee.
Another sigh!—it may not be:—
Let time and absence prove me;
Then doubt shall cease, and thou shalt see
How steadfastly I love thee.
Remember how we oft have strayed,
As I, at eve, have met thee,
So lovely by yon Hawthorn shade!
And how can I forget thee?—
Forget me not, though now we part,
Nor let our parting grieve thee;
But trust the firmness of a heart,
That will not—cannot leave thee!

BOLD AND TRUE.

Oh, Bold and True,
In bonnet blue,
That fear or falsehood never knew;
Whose heart was loyal to his word,
Whose hand was faithful to his sword—
Seek Europe wide from sea to sea,
But bonny Blue-cap still for me!
I've seen Almain's proud champions prance—
Have seen the gallant knights of France,
Unrivall'd with the sword and lance—
Have seen the sons of England true,
Wield the brown bill and bend the yew.
Search France the fair, and England
free,
But bonny Blue-cap still for me!

NARRATIVE OF A SOLDIER OF THE SEVENTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

Concluded.

"The artillery had been tearing away, since day-break, in different parts of the line. About twelve o'clock, we received orders to fall in, for attack. We then marched up to our position, where we lay on the face of a brae, covering a brigade of guns. We were so overcome by the fatigue of the two days' march, that scarce had we lain down, until many of us fell asleep. I slept sound for some time, while the cannon-balls, plunging in amongst us, killed a great many. I was suddenly awakened. A ball struck the ground a little below me, turned me heels-over-head, broke my musket in pieces, and killed a lad at my side. I was stunned and confused, and knew not whether I was wounded or not. I felt a numbness in my arm for some time. We lay thus about an hour and a half under a dreadful fire, which cost us about 60 men, while we had never fired a shot."

"The noise and smoke were dreadful. At this time I could see but a very little way from me; but, all around, the wounded and slain lay very thick. We then moved on, in columns, for a considerable way, and formed line; gave three cheers, fired a few volleys, charged the enemy, and drove them back. At this moment a squadron of cavalry rode furiously down upon our line. Scarce had we time to form. The square was only complete in front, when they were upon the points of our bayonets. Many of our men were out of place. There was a good deal of jostling for a minute or two, and a good deal of laughing."

"Lord Wellington came riding up.—We formed square, with him in our centre, to receive cavalry. Shortly the whole army received orders to advance. We moved forwards in two columns, four deep, the French retiring at the same time. We were charged several times in our advance. This was our last effort nothing could impede us; the whole of the enemy retired, leaving their guns & ammunition, and every other thing behind. We moved on towards a village, and charged right through, killing great numbers, the village was so crowded. We then formed on the other side of it, and lay down under the canopy of heaven, hungry and wearied to death."

"We had been oppressed, all day, by the weight of our blankets and great coats, which were drenched with rain, and lay upon our shoulders like logs of wood.—Scarce was my body stretched upon the ground, when sleep closed my eyes.—Next morning when I awoke, I was quite stupid. The whole night my mind had been harassed by dreams: I was fighting and charging, reacting the scenes of the day, which were strangely jumbled with the scenes I had been in before. I rose up and looked around, and began to recollect—The events of the 18th came before me one by one; still they were confused, the whole appearing as an unpleasant dream. My comrades began to awake and talk of it: then the events were embodied as realities. Many an action had I been in, wherein the individual exertions of our regiment had been much greater; and our fighting more severe; but never had I been where the firing was so dreadful, and the noise so great. When I looked over the field of battle, it was covered and heaped in many places: figures moving up and down upon it, the wounded crawling along the rows of the dead, was a horrible spectacle: yet I looked on with less concern, I must say, at the moment than I have felt at an accident when in quarters. I have been sad at the burial of a comrade, who died of sickness in the hospital, and followed him almost in tears, yet have I seen after a battle, fifty men put into the same trench, and comrades amongst them, almost with indifference. I looked over the field of Waterloo as a matter of course—a matter of small concern."

We cannot resist inserting a little pleasing recollection which our Scotch soldier met with at Paris, when he was there with the army, after this great victory.
"When we were in camp before the Thuilleries, the first day, two girls were looking very eagerly up and down the regiment, when we were on parade: 'Do you wish a careless husband, my dear?' said one of our lads. 'May be; will you be?' said a Glasgow voice. 'Where the devil do you come from?' said the rough fellow. 'We're Paisley lasses; this is our regiment: we want to see if there's any body here we ken.' The soldier, who was a Glasgow lad, could not speak. There is a music in our native tongue, in a foreign land, where it is not to be looked for, that often melts the heart when we hear it unexpectedly. These two girls had found their way from Paisley to Paris, and were working at tambouring, and did very well."

"We must give likewise the affecting account of his return home.
"Hope and joy were my companions, until I entered the Firth. I was on deck: the morning began to dawn: the shores of Lothian began to rise out of the mist. 'There is the land of eaves,' said the captain. A sigh escaped me,—recollections crowded upon me—painful recollections. I went below to conceal my feelings, and never came up until the vessel was in the harbour. I ran from her, and hid myself in a public-house. All the time I had been away was forgot. I was so foolish as to think I would be known, and laughed at. In about half an hour, I reasoned myself out of my foolish notions, but could not bring myself to go up the Walk to Edinburgh. I went by the Easter Road. Every thing was strange to me, so many alterations had taken place; yet I was afraid to look any person in the face, lest he should recognise me. I was suffering as keenly, at this moment, as when I went away: I felt my face burning with shame. At length, I reached the door of the last house I had been in, before leaving Edinburgh. I had no power to knock: happy was it for me that I did not. A young girl came into the stair. I asked her if Mrs. — lived there. 'No,' she said, 'she has fitted long ago.' 'Where does she live?' 'I do not know.'—Where to go I knew not. I came down stairs, and recognized a sign which had been in the same place before I went away. In I went, and enquired. The landlord knew me. 'Tom,' said he, 'are you come back safe? Poor fellow! give me your hand.' 'Does my mother live?'—'Yes, yes; come in, and I will send for her,—not to let the surprise be too great.' Away he went,—I could not remain, but followed him; and the next minute, I was in the arms of my mother."

Here we could have wished the book had closed, and that our gallant soldier were still living under the roof of his parent, and within the reach of his country's love. But we stated at the outset, the melancholy conclusion,—that his mother died, and that we had the discomfort to see him once more thrown loose as a wanderer over the wide world! How earnestly must every person, capable of appreciating the mind displayed in this narrative, wish that the desolate heart of the writer may be cheered, by knowing, in the place of his voluntary exile, that his countrymen share in his feelings, and lament his fate!

PORT HOPE NAIL MANUFACTORY. J. BROWN begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that he has commenced manufacturing NAILS of every description, of a superior quality, which he will sell for cash or approved bills, as low as they can be obtained at any manufactory in the United States. Port Hope, July 3, 1826.

PACKETS, for Steerage Passengers only, to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New York. The ships composing this line are all of the first class, copper-fastened and coppered, of about 400 tons burthen, and as fast sailers as any packets in the trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced masters, whose best endeavours will be to promote the comfort of passengers, and the appointed days of sailing will be strictly adhered to. The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay & expense too often attending the uncertainty and protracted departure of a transient vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support, as will ensure its continuance and success. To Irish Emigrants this line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish ports and Liverpool, by means of steam-boats and smacks, and to all it will extend the peculiar advantage of a connexion with respectable companies upon the Hudson River and the New York canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces. Those who wish to send for their friends can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to John Macaulay, Esq. Kingston, William Gamble, Esq. York, or James Morris, Esq. Brockville, Upper Canada. New York, March, 1828.

M. at Forth's Inn, licences to cut timber on the waste or ungranted lands of the Crown in Upper Canada, on the tract of land bordering on the Grand or Ottawa River, above the Chaudiere Falls. P. ROBINSON, York, 26th July 1828.

ERNEST TOWN CLOTH FACTORY. THE Subscribers beg leave to acquaint their friends and the public, that they have erected a manufactory on the Mill Creek, in the third concession of Ernest Town, for the purpose of picking, carding, and spinning Wool, and Weaving, Fulling, Colouring, and dressing Woolen Cloths & Satinets, which they expect to have in operation in a few days. This being the first establishment of the kind commenced in the Midland District, and no pains or expense having been spared to procure experienced workmen and machinery of the best description, the Subscribers confidently trust, that a liberal and discerning public will duly appreciate the attempt to extend the domestic manufactures of the country, and favour it with that patronage and support which they are determined to use their best exertions to deserve. Wool will be taken and manufactured either on shares or at a reasonable price; or Carding, Fulling, or any other part of the process performed for those who wish it on moderate terms. ISAAC FRASER, DAVID B. BROWN, ENOCH DRAKE. Ernest-town, 26th May, 1828.

NEW SCHOOL. WE whose names are hereunto subscribed, recommend Mr. Robert Jeffers, as a man of capability and experience, and fitted to superintend the Education of Youth, not only by theory, but also by a long acquaintance with the real and actual practice of Business. We therefore believe it would be of advantage to a portion of the rising generation, that he should undertake such an employment. GEORGE O'KILL STUART, Archdeacon of Kingston. W. FRASER, F.F.D.

Encouraged by the recommendation of the above Venerable and Rev. Characters, and at the instance of a numerous and respectable circle of friends, the subscriber has taken that most eligible and commodious School Room in the house owned by Mrs. Tapin (pronounced Tapau) 1/2 minutes walk from the English Church—about the same distance from the French Church, and within a few paces of Front street. Those Parents who may feel disposed to commit their Children to the subscriber's care, may rest assured of having justice done to them, as he intends to take but a limited number of pupils, and is determined to make it the interest of Parents to patronise him. ROBERT JEFFERS. Kingston, May 12th, 1828.

WANTED, immediately, at Davis' Mill, South Crosby, Rideau Canal, a number of Stone Cutters, to whom liberal wages will be given, either by the day or foot, with all tools found, if required. Also, a number of Quarry Men, to whom liberal wages will be given, and regular payments made, either by the month or week. DONALD MCLIVER, Kingston, 24th May, 1828.
