

THE COUNTRY GIRL.

By WORDSWORTH.

That happy gleam of vernal eyes,
Those locks from Summer's golden skies,
That o'er thy brow are shed:
That cheek—a kindling of the morn.
That lip—a rose bud from thorn,
I saw; and Fancy sped
To scenes Arcadian, whispering thro' soft air,
Of bliss that grows without a care;
Of happiness that never flies—
How can it, where love never dies?
Of promise whispering were no blight
Can reach the innocent delight;
Where pity to the mind conveyed
In pleasure is the darkest shade,
That Time, unrikked grandisre, flings
From his smoothly gliding wings.

What mortal form, what earthly face,
Inspired the pencil, lines to trace,
And mingle colors that could breed
Such rapture, nor want power to feed?
For had thy charge been idle flowers,
Fair damsel, o'er my captive mind,
To truth and sober reason blind,
Mid that soft air, those long lost bowers,
The sweet illusion might have hung for hours!

Thanks to this tell-tale sheaf of corn,
That touchingly bespeaks thee born,
Life's daily tasks with them to share,
Who, whether from their lowly bed
They rise, or rest the weary head,
Do weigh the blessing they intreat
From Heaven, and feel what they repeat
While they give utterance to the prayer
That asks for daily bread.

THE GENERAL AND HIS LADY.

(Concluded from our last.)

With regard to accomplishme its, she knew what was commonly taught in a country school above twenty years ago, and nothing more; played a French harp a little, talked a little indifferent French; painted shells and roses, not particularly like nature, on card racks and hand screens; danced admirably; and was the best player at battledore and shuttlecock, hunt-the-slipper, and blind-man's-buff in the county. Nothing could exceed the glee with which, in any family where she was intimate, she would join the children in a game of rompe, herself the gayest and happiest child of the party.

For cards she had no genius. Even the noise and nonsense of a round table could not reconcile her to those bits of painted pasteboard; this was unlucky. It is true that the general, who played a good rubber, and looked upon it, next to a review or a battle, as the most serious business of his life, and who had, moreover, a settled opinion that no woman had intellect enough to master the game, would hardly have wished to have been her partner at the whist-table; but he also loved a snug party at piquet, just to keep him awake after dinner, and would have liked exceedingly that Mrs. Sanford should have known enough of the rules to become a decent antagonist. He was not unreasonable in his expectations; he did not desire that she should play well enough to win. He only wanted her to understand sufficient of the game to lose in a creditable manner. But it would not do; she was unconquerable stupid; never dealt the right number of cards; never showed her point; was ignorant even of the common terms of the art; did not know a quart from a pint, or a pique from a cadette; could not tell when she was cadetted.—There was no comfort in beating her; so the poor general was fain to accept his old brigade-major as a substitute, who gave him three points and beat him.

In other respects she was an excellent wife, gentle, affectionate and sweet-tempered. She accommodated herself admirably to all the general's ways; listened to his admonitions with deference and to his stories with attention,—the formidable one, beginning "When I was in Antigua," not excepted; was kind to the old brigade-major; and when he, a confirmed old bachelor, joined his patron in certain dissertations on the natural inferiority of the sex, heard them patiently, and if she smiled, took good care they should not find her out.

To be sure, her carelessness did occasionally get her husband into a scrape. Once, for instance, when he being inspecting certain corps twenty miles off, she undertook to bring his dress clothes, for the purpose of attending a ball given in his honour, and forgot his new inexpressibles, thereby putting the poor general to the trouble and expense of sending an express after the missing garment, and keeping him a close prisoner till midnight, in expectation of the return of his messenger. Another time he being in London, and the trusty major also absent, she was commissioned to inform him of the day fixed for a grand review; sat down for the purpose; wrote a long letter full of chit-chat—and he could not abide long letters; never mentioned military affairs; and on being reminded of her omission, crammed the important intelligence into a crossed postscript, under the seal, which the general, with his best spectacles, could not have deciphered in a month! so that the unlucky commander never made his appearance on the ground, and but for a forty years' reputation for exactness and punctuality, which made any excuse look like truth, would have fallen into sad disgrace at head-quarters.

In process of time, however, even these little errors ceased. She grew tall, and her mind developed itself with her person; still lively, ardent and mercurial in her temperament, with an untiring spirit of life and motion, and a passionate love of novelty and gaiety, her playfulness ripened into intelligence her curiosity became rational, and her delight in the country deepened into an intense feeling of the beauties of nature. Thrown amidst a large and varying circle, she became, in every laudable sense of the phrase, a perfect woman of the world. Before a change in the volunteer system, and a well merited promotion took the general from B., she had learned to manage her town visits and her country visits, to arrange soirees and dinner parties, to give balls and to plan pic-nics, and was the life and charm of the neighbourhood. I would not even be sure that she had not learned piquet, for lovely as she was, and many as there were to tell her that she was lovely, her husband was always her first object and her whole conduct seemed guided by the spirit of that beautiful line, in the most beautiful of ballads,—

"For auld Robin Gray's been a guide man to me."

Since his death—for she has been long a widow—Lady Sanford—have I not said that the good general became Sir Thomas before his disease?—has lived mostly on the continent, indulging, but always with the highest reputation, her strong taste for what is gayest in artificial life, and grandest in natural scenery.—I have heard of her sometimes amongst the brilliant crowds of the Roman carnival, sometimes amidst the wildest recesses of the Pyrenees; now looking down the crater of Vesuvius; now waltzing at a court ball at Vienna. She has made a trip to Athens; and has talked of attempting the ascent of Mont Blanc! At present she is in England; for a friend of mine saw her, the other day, at the Cowes regatta, full of life and glee, almost as pretty as ever, and quite as delightful. Of course, being also a well dowered and childless widow, she has had lovers by the hundred, and offers by the score but she always says that she has made up her mind not to marry again, and I have no doubt of her keeping her resolution. She loves her liberty too dearly to part with the blessing; and, well as she got on with Sir Thomas, I think she has had enough of matrimony. Besides, she has now reached a sedate age; and there would be a want of discretion, which hitherto she never has wanted, in venturing—
"What was that you said, ma'am?"
"The newspaper!—Have I read the newspaper? People will always talk to me when I am writing! Have I read to-day's paper? No: what do you wish me to look at? This column; police reports—new publications—births!—oh, the marriages!—Yesterday, at Bow Church, Mr. Smith to Miss Brown.—Nor that? Oh, the next!—On Friday last, at Cheltenham, by the Venerable the Archdeacon P.—Dennis O'Brien, Esq., of the—th regiment." "But what do I care for Dennis O'Brien, Esq.? What's Heeuba to me, or I to Heeuba? I never heard of the gentleman before in my days. On! it's the lady!—Dennis O'Brien, Esq. to Lady Sanford.—Angels and ministers of grace defend us! here is a surprise!—to Lady Sanford.—ay my eyes do not deceive me, it's no mistake.—relict of the late Major-General Sir Thomas Sanford, K. C. B. And so much for a widow's resolution! and a gay widow's too! I would not have been surprised to see a general's widow, at the ripe age of forty (ah, age of discretion!) married to an ensign in a marching regiment, young enough to be her son, I warrant me, and as poor as a church mouse! If her old husband could but know what was going forward, he would chuckle in his grave at so notable a proof of the weakness of the sex—so irresistible a confirmation of his theory. Lady Sanford married again! Who after this, shall put faith in woman! Lady Sanford married again!

LONG LIFE.
He who knows not what it is to labour, knows not what it is to enjoy. The felicity of human life depends on the regular prosecution of some laudable purpose or object, which keeps awake and enlivens all our powers. Our happiness consists in the pursuit, much more than in the attainment of any temporary good. Rest is agreeable; but it is only from preceding labours that it acquires its true relish. When the mind is suffered to remain in continued inaction, all its powers decay. It soon languishes and sickens; and the pleasures which it proposed to obtain from rest end in tediousness and insipidity. To this let that miserable set of men bear witness, who, after spending a great part of their life in active industry have retired to what they fancied was to be a pleasing enjoyment of themselves, in a wealthy activity and profound repose. Where they expected to find an elysium, they have found nothing but a dreary waste. Their days have dragged on with uniform languor with the melancholy remembrance often returning of the cheerful hours they passed when they were engaged in the honest business and cheerful labours of the world.

The subscriber has in the Press a Duodecimo Stereotype edition of the New Testament, for the use of Schools, &c. The work will be ready for delivery early in May next—and will be afforded very cheap by the quantity. Country Storekeepers who may wish for a supply, will please send in their orders as early as convenient.
