KINGSTON CHRONICLE.

Saturday, June 5, 1830.

Since our last publication, the Packet Ships Canada, John Jay, and Napoleon, have arrived, and furnished dates to the 25th of April. The most interesting circumstance contained in these papers, regards the health of our beloved Sovereign, which, for some time, excited considerable alarm in England. The latest accounts, however er, represent His Majesty as having been able to sign some official documents; and we trust, that ere this, the best and noblest of Monarchs may have been restored to the prayers of his affectionate Subjects. The French assume a high position in the expected Conquest of Algiers. A more formidable expedition has seldom assailed this barbarous and obstinate people; and we apprehend, that a repetition of the bloody days when Lord Exmouth afforded them so firm a specimen of British heroism, has before this, convinced them of the impolicy of opposing themselves to a civilized system of warfare. Some salutary reformation in the penal code of the country, in relation to forgeries, will be submitted by Mr. Peel, confining the punishment of death to certain acts, such as the forgery of the Great Seals of the United Kingdom, the signature of the King, Wills, Bills of Exchequer, &c. The emancipation of the Jews was carried by a majority of 18. It may not be uninteresting to the curious to observe, that the Hebrew characters which describe this number, signifies, also, "life"-an omen of no mean importance Tribes of Israel.

Yesterday being the 4th of June, the 1st and 2nd Regiments of Frontenac Militia, and Capt. Bethune's Troop of Cavalry, mustered in extraordinary numerical strength upon their respective parade grounds. The day was particularly favorable, and the plains in the neighborhood of the Scotch Church, displayed an assemblage that would have done honor to the Campus Martius of Roman celebrity. The Troop under command of Col. Markland, passed in Review order, and afterwards went through several manœuvres under the command of that meritorious officer, and aided by Col. Kirby. The new system of drill was, for the first time, adopted; and the manner in which it was conducted exceeded the expectations of the crowd assembled to witness this against highly the transfer the Coal Bayrage, wherear appointment to the 2nd Regt. we have inserted elsewhere, assumed the command this day, and manœuvred his Regiment with all the skill of an experienced officer.

At 6 o'clock, the officers of both Regiments sat down to a sumptuous dinner, at Myer's Hotel. The company, including several guests, exceeded 50. The dinner was served in the best style, and did great credit to Mr. Myer's Taste: the wines were of the first quality. Amongst the gucets we observed the Clergy of the Town, Colonel Douglass, Hon. Capt. Byng, Messrs. Yarwood, Marks, Capt. Bonnycastle, besides several gentlemen of the Town. Col. Markland acted as President, and Col. Raynes as Vice .-The excellent Band of the 79th Highlanders attended, and echoed the following toasts with appropriate tunes.

The company did not seperate till an early hour this morning. Several volunteer toasts, and some excellent songs, were given; and we believe the general impression was, a regret that the fourth of June could only be celebrated once pile which has stood for centuries the fondly che rished and living record of former years; and disregarding alike its venerable age and storied fame, feels no respect for the adventitious value which memory flings over the proudly magnificent building, rendered thus more beautiful and lovely by its gradual decay. How many a talle of romantic chivalry-how many a lay of thrilling interest would lose one half their influence were the scite of their locality lost to us for ever? could we not trace the battle ground of Marathon, of Thermopyle, of Quebec, or of Waterloo .-Who would care for Miltiades, for Leonidus, for Wolfe, or, in years to come, for Wellington? It is association which gives a value to every thing: who would remember the proud, the generous Alcibiades, had there been no Socrates? Were this not the case, why do we, with such pleasure, rove amid the dreary passages of Holy Rood and Crosby Hall? were it not for Magna Charta what could we find to interest in Runny-mede? what would give interest to the name of Druid? could we not wander through the Groves of Mona, and fancy that every ancient oak gave a shelter and a resting place to the spirit of some murdered de-With such feelings, and they are general, who could behold, without regret, that all that this Province contains of antiquity, should have been doomed to destruction ?---who could look upon the very stones that had sheltered the Brig Blackston, Esdale, 5th do. from accomplished Frontenac, and the adventurous Father Hennepin, and not feel sorrow that he had not sufficient authority to preserve the edifice from destruction. How much of historic record was recalled by that Round Tower; the silent Monitor depicted to the mind the fierce Iroquois --- the accomplished Governor and the bold Traveller---how many a scene of fierce and exterminating warfare was pictured to the mind by the 6th April, from Shields, to H. G. Forsyth strong bulwark it had been found necessary to & co. in ballast. Ship Sir Walter Scott, erect, to repel that fierce invader. It stood a silent record of the past. The illus-

The gratitude of that age gave his name to the Lake, which is now again known by its Indian name, Ontaris (which, I believe, signifies the pretty lake,) and seldom has the gratitude of mankind been more justly paid. This accomplished nobleman was at once a Statesman, a Soldier, and a Scholar--his domestic virtues, if they may be so termed, obtained from Father Hennepin, a man of great virtue and learning, and of indefatigable research. and withal bold and adventurous in the cause of his Holy Faith, the following culogium: They have endeavoured to blacken his reputation, to eclipse his glory, and to render him suspected; but I am bound to say, to the praise of that illustrious nobleman, that he was a father to the poor, and a protector to those that were in danger of being oppressed; and that his conversation was a perfect model of virtue and piety. -

Such was the man who built the stone fort, whose demolition has been rendered necessary by the public service. Such is the character History draws of that man, whose name is continued to us by the County in which we live.

The space which can be allotted to this introduction now compells me to quit a subject which I find so interesting, that I could with pleasure dwell upon his virtues for many columns. The Count, however, is a character to whom, at some future period, this series of papers will probably often recur. The Iroquois will form a considerable portion of the Dramatis Personæ of the succeeding numbers. Should these tales excite the most trifling taste for enquiry into the former state of this Province, the writer's object will be attained; his motto must still be " Utile cum

Father Hennepin, whose name has been already honourably noticed, has established for himself a name and reputation which ephemeral notice like the present can no way affect; but there is a degree of unpretending observation that should not be neglected in his work, and it is delightful to read a book written so long since, which bears such powerful internal evidences of truth; evidences which our more extended knowledge of gallant men who fell in our defence during the the present day can fully corroborate. When we consider the worthy Father's opportunity to cherished by the word of God-forms no apoloembellish and heighten, we feel that no little praise is due to that innate love of truth which could resist the temptation. For publishing a weekly Religious Newspaper at Kingston, Upper Canada-to be exclusively devoted to the Established Church of England, and the support and illustration of her primitive and Apostolic Dictrine, Ministry and Worship-to be called

HILST other denominations of Christians are engaged in the laudable undertaking of circulating periodicals and other useful vehicles of Religious Instruction according to their respective views, in unlimited numbers, it has ever been a matter of regret that the Church of England should have slumbered upon the project we now (under the Divine Blessing) anticipate the success of, and which in a few words is expressed at the head of this Prospectus. That this indifference has arisen from the conscious superiority of those principles which they cannot but love; principles sanctioned by antiquity and gy to the rising generation of Episcopalians in this infant Colony for the neglect in impressing their minds with a just view of the importance of their hereditary doctrines, and the necessity of a strict adherence to the pure principles of that venerable Institution of which they profess then-
