

SONNET.
ON PARTING WITH A FRIEND, GOING ABOARD.
By Thomas Pringle.
O, I could wish, in that light bark with thee,
Now while the stormy night-wind rages loud,
And the dim moon gleams through the dusky
cloud,
To travel o'er the wild and trackless sea!
What joy, believe the strong gale drifting free,
To feel the soul (long numbered) 'mid the crowd
Of earthward-pressing cares) emerging proud,
To picture bliss and glory yet to be!
—And yet, with lingering gaze upon that shore,
To weep for all the friendly hearts we leave—
And leave even those we love not with a sigh—
As parting spirits look to earth once more
With human love—exulting while they grieve—
From the dim Ocean of Eternity!

RETROGRESSION OF NIAGARA FALLS.
It has been a much disputed point whether the celebrated Cataract in a former age was at Queenston heights. The opinions we now cite on the question are from Lyell's "Principles of Geology," lately published.
"The falls of Niagara afford a magnificent example of the progressive excavation of a deep valley in solid rock.—That river flows from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario, the former being 330 feet above the latter, and the distance between them being 32 miles. On flowing out of the upper lake, the river is almost on a level with its banks; so that if it should rise perpendicularly eight or ten feet, it would lay under water the adjacent flat country of Upper Canada on the west, and the State of New York on the east. The river where it issues is about three quarters of a mile in width. Before reaching the falls, it is propelled with great rapidity, being a mile broad, about twenty-five feet deep, and having a descent of fifty feet in half a mile." After this immense body of water has been precipitated over a precipice of 160 feet, "the bed of the river below the falls is strewn over with huge fragments which have been hurled down into the abyss. By the continual destruction of the rocks, the falls have within the last forty years receded nearly fifty yards, or, in other words, the ravine has been prolonged to that extent. Through this deep chasm the Niagara flows for about seven miles, and then the tableland, which is almost on a level with Lake Erie, suddenly sinks down at a place called Queenston, and the river emerges from the ravine into a plain which continues to the shores of Lake Ontario. There seems good reason for the general opinion, that the falls were once at Queenston, and that they have gradually retrograded from that place to their present position, about seven miles distant. If the ratio of recession had never exceeded fifty yards in forty years, it must have required 10,000 years for the excavation of the whole ravine; but no probable conjecture can be offered as to the probable period of time consumed in such an operation, because the retrograde movement may have been much more rapid when the whole current was confined within a space not exceeding a fourth or fifth of that which the falls now occupy.—Should the closing action not be accelerated in future, it will require upwards of 30,000 years for the falls to reach Lake Erie (twenty-five miles distant) to which they seem destined to arrive in the course of time, unless some earthquake changes the relative levels of the district. Should Lake Erie remain in its present state until the period when the ravine recedes to its shores, the sudden escape of that great body of water would cause a tremendous deluge; for the ravine would be much more than sufficient to drain the whole lake, of which the average depth was found, during the late survey, to be only ten or twelve fathoms. But in consequence of its shallowness, Lake Erie is fast filling up with sediment; and the annual growth of the deltas of many rivers and torrents which flow into it is remarkable."

CORRUPTION OF CHRISTIANITY.
THE Christian religion, as given to man by its divine Author, was perfect in truth and simplicity; but it was sent forth into a world in which error abounded, and the stream had hardly left the fountain when it became defiled with mundane impurities. Earnestly and repeatedly does the zealous Paul inveigh against those who mingled with the "beggarly elements" and the "fables" of Judaism with the spiritual precepts of the Gospel; and strongly does he warn to avoid profane and vain babblings, and opposition of knowledge, falsely so called. But the evil was not to be checked, and Oriental and Grecian philosophy rapidly mingled with Gospel simplicity. The heat of eastern climates inspires indolence and the love of contemplation. The human mind becomes absorbed in rapturous visions of light and expanse, and men learn to regard the soul, the commencement of whose existence they cannot conceive, as having descended from the realms of supernatural light into the body its present darksome dungeon, whence it was to ascend to its former blissful abode. Hence the body being a prison, and matter evil, the object of the soul was to emancipate itself from their influence. This was to be best effected, it was thought by mortification of the flesh and senses; and hence the voluntary mutilations, the corporal tortures, rigid abstinence, and all that system of self-torment which distinguishes the yo-gee, the fakier, and the monk. Others, but fewer in number, drew a contrary conclusion, and maintained that the acts of its impure companion were indifferent to its pure soul; and they freely indulged in the practice of the grossest sensuality.—Dr. Lardner's Cabinet Cyclopaedia; Outlines of History.

REVISED EDITION OF THE PROVINCIAL STATUTES.—The number of subscribers for this work, not being equal to the expectations formed by the subscriber, and having intimation from a source of undoubted authority, that the Legislature at its next session, is likely to set about the undertaking, he is for the present reluctantly obliged to abandon his design.
It will be some consolation to him for bringing the matter before the public, as well as for the trouble he has already had, (some progress having already been made in the revision) that he has been instrumental in forwarding a measure which must prove of great utility to the Province.

SALT RHEUM.—This inveterate disease, which has long baffled the art of the most experienced physicians, has at length found a sovereign remedy in Dr. La Grange's genuine ointment. Few cutaneous diseases are met with more successfully by the physician, & none in which he is so universally unsuccessful. This ointment has stood the test of experience, and justly obtained an unparalleled celebrity. It immediately removes the scabs, gives a healthy action to the vessels of the skin, and its original colour and smoothness. Numerous recommendations might be obtained of its superior efficacy, but the proprietor claims that a full cure should be its only commensurate. It has in three or four weeks cured cases of fifteen and twenty years' standing, that had resisted the power of every remedy that was tried. It not only at once gives immediate relief in Salt Rheum, but cures Tinea Capitis, commonly called Scald Head, and all scabby eruptions peculiar to unhealthy children.
There is nothing of a mercurial nature contained in it, and it may be used on infants or others under any circumstances whatever.
