If for silver or for gold, You could melt ten thousand pimples, Into half a dozen dimples, Then your face we might behold, Looking, doubtless, much more snugly, Yet, even then, 'would be d-n'd ugly. Moor's LIFE OF BYRON, VOL. II.

SINGULAR CIRCAMSTANCE.—A circumstance of a very singular nature occurred at the Buli Inn, in this town, on Friday. Amongst the great number of commercial travellers who frequent the custom. house is one who kept a favourite terrier, and it was the custom of the dog to sleep in the stable with the gentleman's horse. On Friday night, the horse and dog were left together as usual, but it should seem that the poor terrier, in reposing himself for the night, had somehow crept over the horse, so that the chain by which it was fastened to the CLOTHING. manger lay across the animal's neck. It is supposed, that in the morning the horse on rising lifted the chain with him, and hanged the dog; which, on the stable-keeper going in in the morning, was found suspended accordingly, and quite dead. By the marks on the hors'es neck, it was plain that the poor creature had not died without a severe struggle.—Eng. pap.
