

VARIETY.

Clementi at eighteen.—He not only surpassed all his contemporaries in execution, taste and expression, but had already composed (though it was not published till three years afterwards) his celebrated Opera 2, a work which, by the common consent of all musicians, is entitled to the credit of being the basis on which the whole fabric of modern piano forte sonatas has been founded, and which, though it is now, from the immense progress which manual dexterity has made in the last 60 years, within the powers of even second rate performers, was, at the period of its production, the despair of such pianists as J.C. Bach and Schroeter, who were content to admit it, but declined the attempt to play what the latter professor declared only to be executed by its own composer, or by that great performer of all wonders, and conqueror of all difficulties, the devil.—Harmonicon for August 1.

At the time that Quin was the hero of Drury lane, an underling of the name of White, used to play the unimportant part of Siward in Macbeth. One evening, when that tragedy was being performed, White, knowing that he should not be wanted until the fifth act, was enjoying himself over a pot of porter in a neighboring public house. Two friends of his entered, and, on seeing him there, one of them exclaimed, "So Jack how is this? I thought you said you were to act to night." Well," said the other, "and if he is; I suppose he has only got to carry on a message." "A message," cried White indignantly, "a message—I'd have you to know, Sir, that I play the English General" adding contemptuously, "Quin does the Scotch."

Lord Edward Fitzgerald's Dagger.—In the desperate resistance which he made (when captured) Lord Edward had no other weapon than a dagger, and the many wounds that he inflicted with it on his two adversaries exceeds belief. This dagger was given by Lord Clare, a day or two after the event, but Mr. Brown, a gentleman well known, and still living in Dublin who has by some accident lost it. He describes it to me, however, as being about the length of a large case knife, with a common buck handle; the blade which was two edged, being of a waved shape, like that of the sword represented in the hands of the angel in the common prints prefixed to the last book of Paradise Lost. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald.

Dr. Goldsmith.—Of Goldsmith's Traveller, Dr. Johnson used to speak in terms of high commendation. A lady, who had the pleasure of hearing Dr. Johnson read it from the beginning to the end on its first coming out, to testify her admiration of it, exclaimed, "I never more shall think Dr. Goldsmith ugly." In having thought so, however, she was by no means singular: an instance of which may be mentioned, because it involves a remarkable one of Dr. Johnson's ready wit: for this lady, one evening being in a large party, was called upon after supper for her toast, and seeming embarrassed, she was desired to give the ugliest man she knew; and she immediately named Dr. Goldsmith, on which a lady on the other side of the table rose up, and reached across to shake hands with her, expressing some desire to be better acquainted with her, it being the first time they ever met: on which Dr. Johnson said, "Thus the ancients, on the commencement of their friendship used to sacrifice a beast betwixt them."

Ancient Price of Labour.—In the year 1352 25th Edward III, wages paid to haymakers was 1d per day; a mow of meadows 3d a day, or 5d an acre; reapers of corn in the first week of August, 2d, in the second 3d, per day, and so on till the end of August, without meat, drink, or other allowance finding their own tools; for threshing a quarter of wheat or rye, 2d; a quarter of barley, 1d; a quarter of oats, 1d; a master carpenter 3d a day; and other carpenters 2d; a master mason 4d per day; other masons 3d, and their servants 1d per day; tilers 3d, and their "knaves" 1d; thatchers 3d per day, and their knives 1d; plasterers, and other workers of mud walls, and their knives in like manner, without meat on drink, and this from Easter to Michaelmas; and from that time less, according to the direction of the Justices.

Churchmen and Dissenters in England and Wales.—The number of cathedral dignities is 855; of church livings, 10,872. Of the latter, 1014 are in the gift of the Government; 3760 of the church; 794 of the universities; 194 of public bodies; 503 of the nobility and gentry; and 60 of the inhabitants of respective parishes. The total number of dissenting congregations is 7904—of these 389 are Roman Catholic, 258 Presbyterian; 1663 Independent; 940 particular Baptist; 107 General Baptists 396 Quaker; 2827 Wesleyan Methodists 424 Calvinistic Methodist; 660 Methodists of other descriptions; and 240 belong to the Home Missionary Society and to other connections. In the public schools in the two countries, there are 274,569 children in the National Society; 53,298 with the British and Foreign School Society; and 609,497 with the Sunday School Union.

Mental and Personal Qualifications of a Wife.—Great good nature and a prudent generosity—a lively look, a proper spirit and a cheerful disposition. A good person, moderate height, but not perfectly beautiful. Young by all means—old by no means. A decent share of common sense, and a small modicum of wit—but no learning—no learning (either ancient or modern) Well but not critically skilled in her own tongue. A proper knowledge of accounts and arithmetic. Not always in the parlour, but sometimes in the kitchen. Ready at her needle but more devoted to plain work than to fine. Fonder of country dances than quadrille or waltzing, add a little given to whist. Decently but not affectedly silent.

The Glasgow Chronicle states that influenza is raging in Edinburgh, and very prevalent in other parts of Scotland. It will scarcely be believed that in the present age of enlightenment that many of the lower orders at Edinburgh have, within the last ten days, actually forsworn the eating of fish, under the impression of the sea being infested with cholera morbus, from the dead bodies thrown over board of those dying of that disease.

To our fair readers it may not be uninteresting to be informed that the cholera morbus is much more civil in its treatment of women than of men. Of the 403 persons attacked in Dantzic previously to the 25th ult. 306 were males, and 97 females; and of the 288 that died, 235 were males, and only 53 females.

A Moorish Beauty.—The Moorish ideas of female beauty differ from our English notions on that point in one considerable respect. With us, a slender waist and graceful figure add very greatly to other personal charms; and fat people, though much respected, are not much admired. This is the very antipodes of Moorish criterion. A really handsome woman ought not to be able to walk, corpulence and comeliness being synonymous, and the extreme of the one being considered the height of the other. A woman of a ton weight is, in the opinion of a Moor, a morsel fit for the Sultan; and instead of the waspish proportion of a modern waste, which is lauded as tightly as the stomach, liver, and other superfluous parts will allow, a Moorish shape is considered, in the opinion of these sensual connoisseurs, as nearly approaching to perfection when it resembles, or rather exceeds the circumference of a but, pipe, or any other large measure.—Brooke's Sketches.

Prince Talleyrand related to the Family of Stanley, Earls of Derry.—The maternal grandmother of Prince Talleyrand was the Princess Orsini (la Princesse des Ursins, as the French style her) who acted so distinguished a part in the Court of Philip V. of Spain, and whose first husband, as appears from "Archdeacon Coxes, History of the Bourbon Kings of Spain," was Adriaen Blaise de Talleyrand, Prince of Chalais. She was of the illustrious family of La Tremouille, from which sprung the heroic Countess of Derby, who, in her husband's absence, defended Latham House against the Parliamentary forces under Gen. Fairfax, in 1645. That the talents of the Princess Orsini have descended to her grandson, few will doubt; and it must also be allowed that he has inherited her courtly and insinuating manners, if not all her high spirit, her frankness and her disinterested attachments.—Literary Gazette.

Extraordinary application of human fat.—In the year 1813 a discovery was made in the Schools of Medicine in Paris, which strongly excited the attention of the professors. The servants of one of the anatomical theatres were informed against trafficking in human fat. They were watched by the police and detected in the fact. A communication was made to the minister of police, and at his desire a medical report on the subject was drawn up, in which the principle was laid down that this fat might propagate diseases. A judicial inquiry also took place in which it was proved that there existed amongst the servants of the faculty of medicine and of the private theatres a kind of association for the purpose of trading in the fat of the subjects dissected; and the fat was also used to grease the wheels of their waggons; that several quacks purchased it as a remedy in various diseases; and it was used in enormous quantities by the enamellers and false gem makers, who bought it under the name of dog's or horse's fat.

SALT RHEUM.—This inveterate disease, which has long baffled the art of the most experienced physicians, has, at length, found a sovereign remedy in Dr. La Grange's genuine ointment. Few cutaneous diseases are met with more uretance by the physician, & none in which he is so universally unsuccessful. This ointment has stood the test of experience, and justly obtained an unparalleled celebrity. It immediately removes the scabs, gives a healthy action to the vessel so the skin, and its original colour and smoothness. Numerous recommendations might be obtained of its superior efficacy, but the proprietor chose that a fair trial should be its only commentator. It has in three or four weeks cured cases of fifteen and twenty years' standing, that had resisted the power of every remedy that was tried. It not only at once gives immediate relief in Salt Rheum, but cures Tinea Capitis, commonly called Scald Head, and all scabby eruptions peculiar to unhealthy children.

There is nothing of a mercurial nature contained in it, and it may be used on infants or others under any circumstances whatever.
