

in answer to the above referred to. Don Miguel's letter is written in a very bold style, and we think right to give the substance of the document itself.

Don Miguel, in his reply, declares that "Don Pedro having taken the title of the Duke of Braganza, has by that step become his vassal, and that as such, and by writing the aforesaid letter, he was guilty of want of respect to his sovereign, he should be tried for his crime, as also for having assumed a title to which he had no right, as upon the day of his abdication the title of Duke of Braganza devolved upon the King's son; that as to the pretensions of legitimacy of his daughter, such ideas were now out of fashion; that even if Don Pedro were ignorant that, according to the decisions of the Cortes of Lamego, which decreed that, in case of a division of the two crowns, upon the demise of the King, the largest state should belong to the eldest son, and the smallest to the youngest, a partition which took place upon the death of John IV. as Don Pedro remained in the Brazils, and as Don Miguel ought to have had, and had Portugal, he ought to know that the Portuguese nation, in virtue of his sovereignty, had proclaimed him King, & had on all occasions given him positive proofs of their attachment to his august person; for this adhesion was made quite apparent in the face of the French squadron in the Tagus; that every Frenchman in the squadron could bear testimony to the affection of the Portuguese for his sacred person, and that not one of them lauded without being requested to cry out "Vive Don Miguel!" That Don Pedro had become a second Mina—a complete rebel chief; a disturber of public order; an enemy to the peace of Europe, placing himself in direct opposition to liberal ideas; that he had lost all the charm which the friends of Royalty had in vain sought to confer on him; that there was no one at the present day who could place confidence in a prince like Don Pedro, who was a blind fool to ignorant advisers, chosen from the lowest orders of the people.

Every one, continues Don Miguel—or probably M. de Santarem, whose documents are merely countersigned by Don Miguel—every one, in fact, can judge of Don Pedro by his silly abdications. All the misfortunes of Portugal were caused by his giving it a constitution at variance with the manners and intellectual acquirements of the nation; and also the perfidious machinations planned by the demagogues, his agents. Don Pedro himself factoring more as a revolutionary adventurer than as a Prince of the Portuguese blood.

It is not much calculated to renew a spirit of harmony between the two brothers. LATEST FROM LISBON.—Captain Waterhouse, of the brig Lucy Ann, arrived at Portland on Tuesday last, reports that in Lisbon, on the 24th or 25th of August, a regiment of the King's troops revolted, killed their officers, and marched from their barracks to the public square, proclaiming the constitution, and disarming the police, and giving their arms to the rabble. As they passed, many of the inhabitants joined them. But as soon as Don Miguel heard of the revolt, he mustered the troops he had at hand, surrounded the revolted and fired into them from every avenue, killing from three to four hundred of the regiment. The survivors then surrendered and were thrown on board the prison ships. Soon afterwards 6 or 7 of the principal inhabitants at St. Ubes, of the liberal party, were arrested and thrown into prison, probably because Don Miguel thought them involved in the conspiracy.

Belgium.—The correspondent of the London Times, writes from Paris that the greater part of the French army was to be immediately withdrawn from Belgium. The internal arrangements of the country now indicate hopes of the establishment of peace. It is said that Prussia does not intend to interfere with France on account of the entry of its army into Belgium.

Russia & Poland.—It appears from the Hamburg papers, that the Emperor Nicholas has not given the Poles time to consider whether they will accept of "the tender mercies" held out to them in the proclamation which we published yesterday. His "dogs of war" have not been kennelled or muzzled for a moment, but have held onward after the scent of blood. It appears that the main body of the Russian army is marching upon Warsaw, and that a decisive engagement under its walls was expected in a few days. The Poles express themselves confident of a successful result, but are prepared for the worst.

From the Morning Herald, August 22. Accounts from Warsaw have been received up to the 12th instant. They state that the Russian General, Field Marshal Count Paskovitch, kept the grand army at a cautious distance from the Polish capital (full 50 miles) and as cautiously avoided coming to an engagement. It was thought that his plan was to cut off the supplies from Warsaw. He was said to be expecting reinforcements of troops from the Russian Asiatic provinces, and fears were entertained of these troops bringing in their train the plague, which had, it is stated, some time ago broken out amongst them. The greatest unanimity prevails in the Polish Capital, and all feelings of party spirit have given way to patriotism. The Polish army, at the date of these accounts, was in sight of the Russians, and a great battle was hourly expected. Despatches have been received at Warsaw from Colonel Koss, who accompanied Gielgud to Lithuania, and who was despatched towards Poland. The Colonel continued to maintain himself in the Government of Mohilev. The number of the armed insurgents there, and in the vicinity of Witajak, was estimated at 10,000 men. General Tolstoi had broken up from Wilna to march against them. The report that a part of General Rudgier's corps had crossed the Vistula had not been confirmed. General Dembinski had been appointed Governor of Warsaw, and had already begun to act in that character.

No change of importance had taken place in the position of the armies since the last accounts, but every thing seems to portend an awful and final struggle. These tactics have not, however, hitherto entrapped Skrzywosecki into any act of imprudence; nor does it appear that he himself is desious of courting an encounter; but there is a war party in Warsaw which is calling out for more active measures, and constantly reproaching the Commander-in-Chief with inactivity.

The Fifth Anniversary of the Kingston Auxiliary to the Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Society of London, was held in the Wesleyan Chapel, on Monday evening, 10th October, 1831. Colonel Stone of Gananoque, was unanimously called to the Chair. The Report was then read, and the following resolutions adopted:

1st. That the Report now read be accepted; and that this Meeting regard with grateful acknowledgement to God, the success with which he has been pleased to crown the labours of the British Wesleyan Missionaries.

2nd. That the sublime principle which it is the object of Missionary Societies to diffuse universally among men, is the only certain means by which to effect the civilization of the world.

THE BUDGET OF FUN, A Weekly Paper, devoted exclusively to Fun, Fashion, Flash, and all that's pleasant, by George Siegfried, No. 106, Beekman Street, New York. Each number embellished with a number of exquisitely humorous engravings, from the best American designs, and the inexhaustible stock of London; and a glorious collection of Nerve Working, Side-cracking, Care-deceiving Songs, Anecdotes and Comic Stories, designed for the votaries of Mornus, gleaned from the most tormenting and Laughter-Aggravating Heroes of the present day.
Our plan is such that the most rigid moralist cannot condemn. Our pages will ever be unswayed by a sentiment, which would call up a blush into the cheek of Female loveliness—neither shall we sneer at sacred things, or by dabbling in the politics of the day, stain those columns which are intended to be given to Wit and Laughter, for "Cheerfulness makes every dish a feast And 'tis that crowns a welcome."

The SECOND VOLUME will commence early in November, when it is contemplated to enlarge and considerably improve it—and our zeal for improving our Humorous embellishments and matter shall keep pace with public patronage. The first vol. will contain upwards of 400 cuts, and the second will contain still more.
TERMS.—Published every Saturday morning at $3 per annum in advance. The uncommon expense of Wood Cuts, and the determination of the Publisher to do a cash business, renders advance payment necessary.

A HARD CASE.—A Yankee schoolmaster—a teacher of Chirography—not long since located himself in Rensselaer County, N.Y. and commenced a school under the most favorable auspices. He gathered round him a score of pupils—most of whom were of the fairer order of creation. One, in particular, was, we understand, a very angel in features—one of your beautiful country-maidens, which spring up in their seclusion, fair as the wild flowers of their native valleys. As might have been expected, she played iniquity with the heart of the school master. Day after day he sat by her side,—guided her taper fingers, and felt her dark tresses lightly sweeping his cheek, as she leaned with him towards the manuscript. It was too much—but a man philosophy could not stand it. In a luckless moment, he pressed his lips to her cheek; and impressed upon it one of those kisses, in which "The lip will linger like some bee Sipping a favorite flower."

And what think you gentle reader was the result of all this? Why—the unfortunate chirographer was prosecuted for his lecture on kissing, and turned adrift with a fine of $1000 hanging over his shoulders like the pack of Bunyan's pilgrim. Far be it from us to undervalue the charms of the young lady; but, really, if she sets such an exorbitant price upon her cheek, it will be a long day, we opine before she has another opportunity to exact it.
