We republish the letter of Lenox & Addington which appeared in our supplement on Monday. It remains unrefuted and unrefutable, and exposes the miserable imbecility of the chairstands accountable to the public for the hoax that was practised upon his ignorance and simplicity by those who were ready to avail themselves of both; he may wrap himself round with the classic conselection, " Populus me sibilat, at ver regard that man as honest who could under any restraint publicly attach his signature to a document so manifestly inaccurate in its most important feature.

We have given the Governor's s peech onthe prorogation of the Lower Canada Parliament. If is a document replete with good sense and manly spirit. His Excellency does not hesitate to express in very unqualified terms his disappointment at the rejection of the Supply Bill, and as if such a refusal was anticipated at home, he concludes his remarks on that subject by very pointedly announcing to them that (in obedience to the instructions he has received to that effect,) he finds himself under the necessity of reserving the Bill, voted for the services of the present year, for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure,

It will be seen by a paragraph copied from the Montreal Herald, that the officers connected with the service of the Rideau Canal, having completed that duty, are ordered home : amongst | timony of our faithful and devoted attachment to them is Captain Briscoe, a gentleman who, from a residence here of ten years, has acquired the sincere friendship of many, and the esteem and respect of all who are acquainted with him. Captain Briscoe's exertions upon his section of the canal were ardent and unremitting, and will be a source of self-satisfaction to him when enjoying a less laborious and responsible command. He will carry with him the cordial wishes of the people of Kingston for his future happiness and prosperity.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT .- On Tuesday last a promising young man in the service of Mr. Drummond, whilst cating his dinner, suddenly started from the table, and running towards the stable was followed by the other persons in company, who coming up with him, found him on his face choked by the meat having stuck in his throat : his death was almost instantaneous. The jury returned a verdict to that effect.
