I have enclosed these papers dispose of the public revenue as he (Mr. P.) to Lord Glenelg, directing his Lordship's attention to the Editor's remarks an the Royal Instructions to His Excellency Sir Francis Head, &c. and marking passages in some of the speeches which illustrated and confirmed what I had previously stated to His Lordship, that the principles and statemen's put forth in that document had never been discussed, nor even read, in the House of Assembly, whatever might be the sentiments of honorable members respecting them. As I have been honored with a conspicuous place in the debates of the Assembly on that Report, I solicit a little space in your columns, and beg the attention of my old friends (for friends I know I have in Cauada) to a few remarks on the scurrilous attacks made by Mr. Perry, in this and in a former debate. And first, I would ask if Mr. Perry's constituents elected him as their Rep. How ludicrously and pitiably therefore does Mr. Perry exhibit himself when he codeavours to conceal and justifiy his self-contradictory

I will notice but two more of Mr. Perry's or any other individual has to dispose of his own property. How contrary is this to any thing that I ever stated in my life. My statement on that point (and I appeal to all that I ever wrote, and even to my opponents in confirmation of it) has always been this:-That the King has the same right to dispose of the revenues which the Constitution of the country places at his disposal, as Mr. Perry or any other private individual has to dispose have, any influence with His Majesty's Govof what is by law placed at his disposal-and eroment; but it will be satisfactory to my the revenues arising from Crown lands had been, by the law of England and the law of the Colonies, at the disposal of the King for centuries. Lest I might be mistaken or misrepresented, I even stated the special point of sort of King in Lenox & Addington, and apdifference between the two cases; namely, pears to regard it as a degree of infringement that the king holds the control of the Crown upon his Sovereign prerogatives that I should his own benefit-yet the King and his Minis- he cannot but view it as a conspiracy to deto which said revenues shall pe applied, al- ally, how much more be thinks of bimself though by law at the disposal of the Crown --Government acknowledge no Church and 00,000 a year (as the U. The only other calumny of Mr. Perry's that

I will notice, is, that I have turned my back

Another illustration of Mr. Perry's calonuy, that I have turned my back upon the interests of the people, is that, amongst several suggestions which I took the liberty to offer to Lord Gleuelg, the Colonial Secretary, for terview with his Lordship after my arrival in London, I strongly recommended the appointment of a certain gentleman of known popularity to the Executive Council. I mentioned this in a private letter to a friend in Canada before the late appointments took place; but I should never have thought of adverting we it publicly, had not the persevering efforts of my enemies to create prejudice against me prompted me to do so. I pretend not to say that any of my suggestions have bad, or will friends in Canada, and, if possible, shame my calumniators, to know what I have endeavor-

Mr. Perry seems to consider himself as a throne him from his legislative dignity !- Rethan others, and how much he is to be pitied under his alarming apprehensions! But I a man as Peter Perry being in existence when those of Mr. P.'s constituents with whom I had the great pleasure, and I may add profit, them, at their particular request, can bear record whether the object and tendency of my ministry was to dethrone Peter Perry, or to break down the power and influence of a much more formidable and important personagethe power of him that ruleth in the hearts of the children of disobedience.

I think it is not difficult to conjecture the cause of Mr. Perry's ire. I can easily imagine Mr. Perry, the night before he delivered his speech on the "Grievance Committee Report," revolving the following soliloquy in his mind:-I am in a sad dilemna. Last winter I voted not merely to print a thousand, but moved an amendment to print and circulate two thousand copies of this Report, which I thought would so tell upon the country, that the Methodist Conference would be forsaken -the Episcopal party be triumphant-and my utmost wishes be accomplished; but the tables have been completely turned by that Ryerson, who, having truth and justice on his side, has so defended the Conference and exposed the misrepresentations contained in the Report, and so held up to condemnation these who voted for printing it, that the most illiteobject to be the reform of abuses.
