

...towards them and amuse ourselves by looking at our
...the chain arrow that has lit upon us during this
...the effects of a missile sent from the giant arm of the
...the Editor of the Patriot should have felt it necessary ...and make such a fine adu nothing. His lecture, ...spirited, impressive and elegant as it was, might
...been all well enough only that in the present ...case it is prevailing characteristic is, that it had ...nothing at all to do with the subject.

Previous to the late elections we devoted ourselves heart and soul to the work before us, and discharged our duty in effectually exposing the misdoings of the radical majority of the late House of Assembly. We kept the Counties of Lenox and Addington continually in our minds' eye—selected such articles and subjects as were calculated to awaken the people, and published, and circulated among them extra numbers of our paper, the tone and temper of which we endeavored to adapt to the taste of the moderates, thinking men, whom we were anxious to influence.
That we were devoted in the business is plain, for according to the Patriot's own confession, our "exhortations to the people of Lenox and Addington might make the very stones to rise and mutiny against the miscreant domination of Perry and Bidwell." Really, friend Dalton, it did not before occur to us, that we were in danger of moving the very foundations of nature, although we confess we would rather have done something even in that way, than to have failed in promoting Mr. Cartwright's election. But after this statement, what becomes of the Patriot's lecture? Indeed friend Dalton seems to have forgotten what he was at. It is strange that after our having struggled to benefit the people in those counties, we should be accused of inconsistency, merely because we did not choose to keep up our fire after the enemy had fallen, and did not continue to scour the field even after the entire radical band was routed. We shall reserve to ourselves the privilege of determining what spirit and temper are calculated to render our labours most useful, and shall exercise our good sense of heart by speaking even of our political foes in terms as fair and candid as the case may admit, without consulting the peculiar notions of even our good friend of the Patriot.
People are sometimes liable to mistakes even while estimating their own importance, and we cannot exactly discover why it is that certain of our contemporaries should be so ready with their strictures, lectures, dictations, or whatever they may choose to call them. We have felt it but courteous to notice the article in the Patriot, although we were in truth surprised to find so much redoubtable, twaddle and humbug, where we had a right to expect something better.

Our contemporaries have right to think for themselves, and while we claim the same privilege, we may be allowed to suggest, that this should be the season of moderate measures. In the Parliament and throughout the country the tone of party politics should be moderate. The people are now prepared to act upon rational views and sound principles—they need reason not incentive, and the just feelings and pure principles which they have evinced at the late Elections can only be strengthened and confirmed by judicious, fair, and moderate means.
Many of the Electors who came nobly forward and voted for Constitutional candidates at the Election, did so because they detested the violence of the radical party with which they had acted, and God forbid that they should now find even a tinge of that violent spirit among us. Let the spirit and temper of our journals be such as the intelligence and good taste of the people require. Above all let there be no petty bickerings among Constitutional Editors, and let us not be over anxious to differ with and misrepresent one another. We cannot close without adding, as worthy of attention at the present period, the admirable advice given by the celebrated Burke to the first Bishop sent out to Canada—it is MODERATION! MODERATION!! MODERATION!!!

THE CONSTITUTION AND MACKENZIE!!

We have received the two first numbers of a newspaper published at Toronto by William Lyon Mackenzie, and entitled "The Constitution." This association of terms—"The Constitution and Mackenzie" sounded very queerly to us at first, and for the life of us we could not conceive how it was that the author of the Grievance Report—the eternal admirer of the neighbouring States—the bosom friend of Papiseaux—the leader of the routed Radical faction in this Province, and the distinguished enemy of every thing of British character or influence should take it into his head all of a sudden like to fall in love with the Constitution. Strange as it was, however, yet for the moment it really seemed that the Ethiopian's skin was changed and the Leopard's spots removed.
But upon inspection we were forcibly reminded that all was not Gold that glistens and that although the outside may be specious and pre-possessing yet the inside may be filled with curious and bitterness. We always had a notion that the name of a paper was designed to convey some idea of its character, and no doubt that chosen by Mr. Mackenzie in this attempt would be proper enough were it not for a trifling mistake which in the hurry of publication has probably escaped his notice, and which he will do well to amend in his next. The error to which we refer is one of omission and when the blank is supplied will give the name of the paper in full, thus—"Anti-Constitution." Perhaps Mr. Mckenzie regards the error in name as unimportant and feels confident that what is omitted will be as clearly understood as though it was expressed and of this we entertain no doubt whatever.

In the numbers of the papers before us Mr.
Mackenzie has resumed his labours upon the Welland Canal—talks of principles in his usual way, and complains with a sickening ding-dong about the late Elections. In all this 'tho' the paper has been some time in getting up and its contents prepared deliberately yet there is not an over abundance of argument, and the editorial department betrays, we are sorry to say, much of that violent spirit which has hitherto characterised his writings.
The object of this paper is doubtless to awaken public sympathy and pave Mr. Mackenzie's way to public favor, but in truth the hope must be a forlorn one. There was a time when he could mislead the people but that time is past.

We would not, however, be uncivil to our visitors on its first arrival, and having gone through the form of an introduction, we will omit till some future opportunity the notice that we may think proper to take of the sentiments, politics, &c. that may be disseminated in "The Constitution."

It is with feelings of deep regret that we have to notice the death of Mrs. Wingfield, lady of Captain W. H. Wingfield, and eldest daughter of that highly esteemed officer, Lieut. Col. Mitchell, who has commanded the Royal Artillery at this post for nearly five years. The amiable manners and excellent qualities of the deceased were well known and duly estimated by a large circle of acquaintance in this town, who now with feelings of keen sorrow deplore her loss.

"An Observer's" communication is inadmissible. We may have been wrong in attempting to frame explanations and apologies for the editor of the Whig in our last number, but really it was not easy to resist the impetuosities of a neighbor, who, to use his own words, had become involved in a most horrible mess. "An Observer's" article is a happy one—his strictures are very pointed and his satire irresistible, and would afford us the luxury of a laugh at the Doctor's expense, but we have resolved to allow what has or may appear in the Whig to pass unnoticed.

To the Editor of the Chronicle & Gazette.

Sir,—I regret exceedingly that a few of the Orangemen (contrary to the opinion of their more experienced brethren) walked in procession on 19th inst. I would fain hope that the good work of union among Irishmen (which was so delightfully progressing) will not be interrupted—that the actings of a few will not be charged upon the whole. I do hope that the thinking and respectable among both Orangemen and Catholics, so far from being led into heat or animosity by either the ignorant or unthinking acts of the lower orders of their respective parties, will use their influence to remove every hindrance to conciliation. The union of Irishmen, in conjunction with the Rose and Thistle, has proved, in the present instance, the salvation of Upper Canada. Let it be perpetuated. Let not our Constitution and the interests of our noble Province be sacrificed to party spirit. Let not, what has always been the curse of Ireland, become the curse of Canada. We are "Brothers from the South"—let us act as such.

Wishing well to every Catholic as well as every Protestant, I am the friend of A PATRIOTIC ORANGEMAN.

COURT OF SESSIONS.

The following extraordinary circumstances transpired in the Court of Sessions yesterday.
We quote from the reports of the Times, and the Courier and Enquirer:—

William D. Gray, a remarkably good looking young man, very dark eyes, rather small and slender in make, but elegant and genteel in appearance, dressed in a neat black suit, and the celebrated companion of Richard P.
Robinson, was charged on three indictments, with stealing articles from different persons, coat, trousers, vest, hat, &c.

The prisoner smiled when the third indictment was read, apparently at the idea of their coming so thick upon him. He was standing by the side of a black man, on one of the benches, who was also charged with stealing clothing.
One of the indictments was for grand larceny, and the other two for petty larceny.

On being asked if he was ready for trial, he answered, no. He had no witnesses and no counsel, nor had he had an opportunity of getting any. He had been kept at Bellevue in a dungeon, in the dark, separate from the other prisoners; had no opportunity of conversing with any person or of procuring counsel. If the court will allow him a light room, and pen, ink and paper, he will endeavor to procure counsel, and be ready for trial next week.

This Gray is the individual whose cloak it was said Richard P. Robinson had on on the night of the murder, and which was found in the yard in rear of Thomas street. In regard to his complaint of having been kept in the dungeon, the recorder stated that the management of the prison belonged to the keeper, and was only under the jurisdiction of the judges.
It was necessary, at times, to keep prisoners secluded, as some of them had many persons calling to see them, and made an improper use of privileges. But in the present instance there was still another, and an important, and most revolting reason why the rigors of the prison were enforced upon him. It appears, that while Robinson was in prison at Bellevue, Gray was also there, and they contrived during that time to keep up a correspondence by letters with each other. After Gray's arrest, a letter, written by Robinson to him, whilst both of them were in prison, was found upon him, in which Robinson states that he, himself, would be tried on such a day, acquitted on such a day, and that if he, Gray, wanted to get clear of his wife, and to get married again, that he would be able, when he got out, to get a divorce from his wife, as he, Robinson, after his acquittal, would go and seduce her, and be an evidence for him to prove the criminal conversation; adding that it was not the first time he was obliged a friend in that way. This letter was written only a few days before Robinson was tried for his life. The court decided the prisoner (Gray) should have till Monday next, till 11 o'clock, and the counsel he might engage should have access to him, and a proper room be allowed them.

And this young man (Robinson) is the 'boy' in whose behalf such efforts were made to enlist the public sympathies! The court room was packed with his licentious associates, to hiss and applaud, as opportunity might occur, in furtherance of the design, which was manifest from the beginning, to brow-beat the community, mock public justice, and procure his acquittal at all events. The young man verily appears to stand out alone and above all others in his iniquity—a monster of the human species. History affords not a parallel to his case. We have said, however, and we say it again—although not a particle of doubt exists in this community of his guilt in the "taking off" of Heleu Jewett—that the jury did right in his acquittal, under the circumstances of the case as presented to them by the public prosecutor. On the testimony laid before them they could do no otherwise. We are aware that the District Attorney has, over and over again, been charged with corruption in this matter. We believe no such thing.
He probably supposed he should be able faithfully to try the young man, and convict him, and yet spare the feelings and characters of the "gentlemen" who lodged with Rusina Townsend and her precious household on the night of the murder. The counsel opposed were, moreover, an overmatch for him, and his humane feelings, and truly amiable temper, enabled his sagacious and eloquent opponents to persuade him to yield too much.

There is one fact in regard to the depravity of Robinson, which we believe has never been published. His private journal, which is a loathsome record of his licentiousness, and his consequent diseases, was ascribed to him—but our pen revolts from the office of carrying out the record of his if possible deeper by the public at the unaring efforts made by Mr. Hoxie, in behalf of this wretched young man. But all who are acquainted with Mr. Hoxie, know that his heart is the abode of kindness and be-devotion, and we have reason to know that in this painful case, he was governed by the best feelings of his nature. The accused was a youth in his employ, and toward whom he stood in the relation of guardian. And he doubtless acted toward him, just as he or any other parent, would himself desire to have a friend act toward a son, at a distance from the parental roof, who might be so unfortunate as to stand in the same situation among strangers.

In the course he took, therefore, Mr. Hoxie did more than to fulfil the golden rule of the Saviour of Men—who has taught that "in all things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye the same unto them." This Gray, we have seen it somewhere stated, has been confined in the penitentiary for a brutal assault upon his wife.

On the acquittal of Robinson, a great flourish was made about his falling upon his father's neck and weeping. If so, it must have been sheer acting. His conduct immediately afterwards was that of his indelible levi; and on the day following, his language respecting his father—when the gaoler was making out his bill—was not only disrespectful, but unfeeling.

FORWARDING.

UNITED LINES OF THE RIDEAU AND ST. LAWRENCE.

THE OTTAWA AND RIDEAU FOR-WARDING COMPANY beg leave to notify their friends and the public generally, that they have United their Line with that of the Canada Inland Forwarding and Insurance Company.

Although a decided preference has justly been given to the Rideau Line from the superior craft in which goods are forwarded as well as the certainty with regard to time and diminution of risk attending the transport, yet some objections have been raised to the Canals being closed earlier in the Fall than the River St. Lawrence, and to obviate these objections the Company intend this Union to keep a full supply of Boats on the St. Lawrence, not with a view of doing their business generally by that route, but to accommodate their Customers in the spring and fall, as well as to meet every possible contingency that might take place on the Canal and restore to the Company the fullest confidence of the public.

To facilitate the Transport of Goods destined for the Ports of Lakes Ontario and Erie, the Company have arranged for their transhipment at both the Ports of Prescott and Kingston, but from its eligibility, intend the latter to be the principal place of transhipment, when the Rideau Canal is re-opened, and no advance on the present rate of freight will be demanded from their regular customers while the Rideau Canal is open in the fall. Their Stores at Prescott are those of the Canada Inland Forwarding Company, and Mr. W. Dickinson, their Agent, will continue to conduct the business there.

Goods forwarded by the Rideau Canal will not be insured unless ordered by the owners; those that may be forwarded via the St. Lawrence will be insured by the Company unless otherwise directed.

Mr. F. Hackett of the Canada Inland Forwarding and Insurance Company will at all times be ready to receive orders for this Company, to whom, as well as the Company's Agents at Montreal and Kingston application may be made.
