Coursel for the Planetiff, 11. J. Boulton, E-q-11 M. R. w. H. F.q. Q. C., Robert P. Crooks, Esq. and James Smith, Fig.
For the Defendants. The Atterney General, Henry

Sherwood, Feq., Q. C., Thomas Kirkpatrick, Esq., and John A. Mandenald, Esq., The case was opened by the plaintiffs' senior control, who stated that the defendants were chargeof with the receipt of the projectly as common carthat at Cobeing, in the Namestle District, and that for certain is ward to them to be paid in the is half, they undertook safely and scenerly to de-liker the property to the plainfulf at Montreal in Lower Canada.

Break-that they did not d liver, in the first econt of plaintiff's declaration. And in the second count they were charged with the receipt of the perperty at hingston to be delivered at Montreal, concloding the same as in the first count.

To these the defendants pleaded, the general issue which put in issue all the material allegations in plaintiff's declaration. The evidence adduced did not support the first count of the declaration, which was therefore abandened by plaintiff's counsel. Not so, however, with the second. The plaintiff proved that on or about the 11th April, 1810, the defendants received certain produce of the plaintiff at Kingston, in he forwarded by them to Montrealthat on the 18th following, a storm arese and the American steamer Telegraph was obtiged to get up scam to move away from the wharf, to avoid being injured,-that when in the act of getting under way, a spark of her from the steamer fell into or about defendants' stores, and set them on fire, when the whole were consumed with their contents, and amongst which was the property of the plaintiff, for the recovery for the lass of which the present action

The value of the property was proved, and the case closed for the plaintiff, when the Atturney General opened for the defendants, and relied upon two grounds for defence: the first was, that the defendants had notified the plaintiff not to send his produce to them so early in the season, and before the navigation was opened-and that therefore they should not be clarged with the less,-and the second was, that the property when received in the stores of the defendants was received by them as warehousemen, and not as carriers, and that as they were to receive no reward therefor,-that unless gross negligence or misfeoxance on their part were proved, that they were not liable. On the first point the learned Judge was of eninger that the subsequent receipt of the property by the de-fendants was a waiver of the notice.

And on the second ground, that the defendance were only warehouseners, that that could not evan them, for it was in the face of plain and direct testimony, that the defendants had received this property to be forwarded, and not fir he purpose of being stored mevely, and that as soon as the reecipt was proved their liability of common carriers arcre,-and from that time until the delivery of the produce at its place of distinution to the plaintiff er his consigner, that they were liable for all losor damage threate, with the exception of loss s or damage occasioned by the act of God or the King's currents, neither of which adjedged cases had decial. d could a loss by an accidental fire such as oce a sioned the loss in this instance be ets set und e. Superior Count. Before Judge Oakley. Joseph Bloor and William Ketchum, vs. President, Directors, &c. of the Mechanic's Bank. An action of trover, brought to recover the valu . of three promissory notes, amounting to $12bank, known as the Farmer's Bank of Toronto, Canade. The notes were drawn by persons at Buffalo, payable in New York, and were discounted by the plaintiffs, and in the early part of 1837, emforsed by them, and sent to the house of Bullock, Lyman, & Co. of Wall street, their agents, for collection.

At this time it appeared that the Mechanics' Bank was in the habit of making loans to Bullock, Lyman & Co. to a large amount, so much as hundreds of thousands of dollars in one day; these loans were mostly made in certified thecks on the Mechanic's Bank, which they deposited in other banks, and were to be provided for on the following day-these were renewed by similar certified checks, and thus the Bullock, Lyman & Co., it appeared, deposited with the bank a large amount of notes as collateral security for these loans, which were contained in a pocket book, and lodged at the bank, and from time to time, as some of them matur ed, others were substituted, so as to keep the amount of security equal to er exceeding the loan. In pursuance of this arrangement, the notes in controversy were so deposited by Bullock, Lyman & Co. Before their maturity, Bullock, Lyman & Co. failed, and the bank claimed the note, which claim the plaintiffs resisted, contending that Bullock, Lyman & Co. had no the part of the bank. The question for the jury was simply as to dict for the defendants.
