Ralph,' resumed she, 'I wished for this-I wayed for this-I ts bounty is perfect. I have no other boon to sak. What relates to itself I have asked for already, and trust I have obtained through the mediation of its appointment. Ralph, let me justify myself to you while the power is spared me.'

"Justify ?' ejaculated I. 'Yes,' replied she, 'so far as my feelings-or rather my conduct towards you is concerned, my memory is all of me that will shortly be left, and I would have it so far perfect, because I would have you cherish it. You know I loved you, but you never knew the nature of my love. Ralph, continby my side when I read to you the tale of 'Paul and Virginia,' Here her lips quivered, and her even fill d with tears. 'Yes,' she was span included and parties with intense ingentousnuss and affection, 'yes, my love for you, Ralph was something akin to my love for Heaven, and such, I thought, Ralph, was your love for me.
