But, what we would have done obsera doubt that Sir Charles Mercalfe will carry out the fully for the suke of peace, we are not disposed to do liberal Monarchical principles caunciated; nor consistency to stand in the calm still it is due by every Loyalist to the dignity of his own reputation for consistency, to stand in the calm tage-to dumage character-to crush by fair means and by foul-to monopolize power, and who have committed the egregious foolery of supposing that the party which taught them Culonial polities - which whipped them out of one antiquated absurdity after another, would submit to leave the Country in their hands, have committed a strange blunder. They might have had peace, let them prepare for war-shey refused to share power upon honorable terms, let them have a care that it does not pass out of the r Scult to say, that any real difference of opinion exhands—they returned 'the magnanimity,' which they were wont to acknowledge, with treachery and inparty now "organized" orlensibly to oppose his gevernment, how great socret the difference between the purposes of Sir Charles Metcalfe and the latent designs of the leaders of that "organization;" and that (if any) the difference cannot, in my humble opinion, be clearly distinguished, until the Governor determination to give to the Country the benefit of our experience of the real character of the jugglessy by which our public affairs have become so disastrough invitant. Thank Prividence, "mettre" water more unfollered and face, to call things by their right names, and exhibit men in their two characters, independent of the transmels of honorary or official station, and atterly regardless of those considrations which weigh upon the free thought, and in-generate expression, is the varied 1 hors of public life through which we have lately passed. Honceforward we can commune with our countrymen, as we nere most to do in times of old, and mover ask next day gliding into the opposite extreme of concontrating all the powers of the state in the will of one individual for a target of months in the name of the prerogatives of the Crown, which, as in England

But now, like the lark, we can rise on our own wing, and pour forth our own strains, rejuicing in a sense of freeby Responsible Government, then do I most referen-ly proclaim, in the name of the loyal pro le of Can-ada—in the name of my Sove eign—in the name of an unsettled and unstable State—and, and as he Providence, is an advantage that the Editorial Chair has over any of these in which we have sat of late. While one sits in it, however hard the work, they values the affections and support of Conservatives of are answerable for nobody's sins-dr follies-or British connexion, IT IS TIME THE GOVERNOR short-comings, but their own; in dignity, it may be somewhat best chevated, but it is second to none in GENERAL OF CANADA HAD GIVEN AN UNEQUIVthe range of usefulness which lies around it, and in OCAL, PRACLICAL EXPOSITION OF WHAT HE MEANS TO BE UNDERSTOOD TO BE THE RULES OF real substantial power not power to dispense of covernment for this branch of the British Dominions, and this fortion of the British Profile, by the Formation of a stret about as one of a drzin, nhe are estimated by stret about as one of a drzin, nhe are estimated by MINISTRY. "Ministry," this word seems used in specific to the positions they are in, rather than for the virtues that adorn them,—but power over sum's intellect and their offictions—power to influence the daily sphere for shadowing forth the powers of the body it designates in the British Empire—but it has been of the seed to tauch the hearts—to enter the dwritings of the seed to the tribulation of the seed to inform, excite, and guide them; pow.r, not without its legitimate check:-- for, when abused, it crasses to forced upon us as good subjects to take it up in the sense which the British Government imparts to it. Whilst you are attacked by an individual assuming be power. Hardly h d ne taken our seat upon our to express the views of the Loyalists in one District, it will not, I trust, be deemed obscusive that one old acquaintance, when we fancied that ten thousand ties which formerly linked our name and daily la-bors with the household thoughts and fireside amusefrom another District—entertaining no less ardent attachment to everything seally British, and no less anxious for the success of the Government of Sir attachment to everything really British, and no less anxious for the success of the Government of Sir Charles Metralfe, nor perhaps less willing to devote his humble energies to ensure that triumph to his west with them to the words to enliven their labors, Charles Meteatic, nor personal that triumph to his sent with them to the west with the west with them to the west with them to the west with the west with them to the west with the west with them to the west with them to the west with the west with them to the west with them to the west with them to the west with the west with them to the west with them to the west with them to the west with the west with the west with the west with them to the west with the west with the west with the west with them to the west with the wes pressed upon him that his adversaries are successfully wielding this apparent supineness on his part to his prejudice.

It is really time this unhappy country were bleased with some established form of Government—and may Sir Charles Metcalfe consummate this to his renown—and when all cardinal principles of Government—and placed by the creation of parties contending legitimately for power asin England—designated by some such names as Whigs and Conservatives—claewhere as Locofoco or Whig—anything but disloyal or loyal; then indeed may he hope to have made his name blessed by the present actors on the theatre, and trade, and agriculture—about our own country and other countries, making us laugh a good deal more, even while we were laughing." Such is the reception we anticipate—heusely but hearty; and we can assure our countrymen, that we fall back among them, consciudes that there is no name by which we have been known of late years, among the dignitaries of the land, that we prize so highly, as the old familiar abreviation; and no field of labor more hosorable than that which we formerly cultivated, with so large a share of approbation, and upon which we are entering again.

"Welcome?"
