KINGSTON, TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 29, 1834.

The New York Mail of this day brings no fresh intelligence from Europe. The latest dates are to the 19th March.

Most of the Toronto papers have given different versions of the reasons which induced Mr. Rolph to retire altogether the corporation of that city. We have carefully perused the several accounts and from them, together with some private information, have compiled the following:

As no person in St. Patrick's ward could be found to represent it, in whom the liberal party could confide so much as they could in Mr. Rolph, that gentleman was strongly solicited to come forward, and direct promises were held out, that in case the liberal party had a majority in the council, that he would be the person on whom the choice for Mayor would fall. Mr. Rolph, on these grounds only, was induced to offer himself for Alderman. and his election followed as a matter of course. At a meeting in the old Court House, Mr. McKenzie was twitted by his opponents with the intention of making himself Mayor. This intention he stoutly denied, and is said to have declared, that "he could be of more use in his capacity of Alderman (should he be elected.) than in that of Mayor." Under the impression therefore, that his ambition reached no higher than that of Alderman, to that office the people elected him; and it was after his return and then only, that the intention to make himself Mayor became manifest. Whether it existed before his elecfor his permission to be nominated, a permission casily obtainparty of their support. But he reckoned without his host, for the liberal party hearing of the tories having promised Mr. R. their unanimous vote, also waited upon him; but to his astonishment declared, that they were determined to support Mr. McKenzie as Mayor; gave it as their opinion that he ought to retire in his favor, and said that if he (Mr. R.) went in, it would be on the shoulders of the tories. Seeing matters stand thus, Mr. Rolph very wisely stayed away from the council altogether, and as his election for Alderman was only to accommodate the party who afterwards deserted him, he availed himself of his privilege as a medical man, and resigned his gown.

Although there can be no doubt that the city would be infinitely more honored in the person of Mr. Rolph, than it is likely to be in the person of Mr. McKenzie, yet taking away the shabby and illiberal conduct of the liberals towards-the former gentleman, we are on the whole satisfied that Mr. McKenzie should be Mayor. Had Mr. Rolph been elected, although the would have worn a different appearance; the tories would then hy his own side, and that his return as Alderman was a mere casual circumstance owing to so many of the mob having voted for him. As it is, nothing of this kind can be said; and ag no vilified than the present Mayor of Toronto, so in proportion to his unmerited persecutions do we wish him joy of his present greatness, and trust that his future discretion will enable him to fill his station with dignity and propriety.

Some observations which fell from the lips of Mr. Perry at the late county meeting in Lenox and Addington, having, through the malice of his political opponents, been distorted from their original signification to his prejudice, it has become necessary to give the real words spoken.

In dilating at length upon the glorious constitution of Great Britain, and its imitation in this colony, and after eulogizing that constitution if properly acted up to, Mr. Perry said: "the government of this country was a mixed form of government, a form of government that experience had taught mankind to be the best. It was divided into three parts; one third was the Sovereign or Executive part, represented in Upper Canada by the King's Licutenant and his council; another third was the aristocracy, feebly represented by the Legislative Council; and the other third was the people in the persons of their representatives in the House of Assembly. This last part was the democratical or republican part of the government, a part that I consider as of the highest importance: a part which requires the atmost care in guarding it from the encroachments of the kingly power or the undermining of the aristocracy. The King's prerogative will take care of itself; so will the aristo- | er; and that at no matter what hour the boat arricratical part of the constitution; but great care is necessary to ved, provided the cargo to be discharged consisted prevent these two branches from uniting to oppress or destroy only of passengers and their baggage, he should be the other third. If the people have bad laws, who have they at liberty to proceed on his route, by merely leaving to thank for them? No one but themselves; for if they will a written report of such arrival at the office, or with not look out and select men, who will be true to them and to one of the Deputies. But that in the event of his their interests, they ought not to complain when they see them- having duriable articles on board, I should require selves sold or betrayed. No law could be passed without the him to remain until they were entered, and the duconsent of the people, but a bad law once passed could not be ty paid according to law; stating to him that the ofrepealed without the consent of the three branches. It is lice was opened for such business at 10 o'clock dutherefore to be seen how highly necessary it was on the part of ring the month of April, and at 9 o'clock during the the people, to guard against the making of bad laws, by the choice of honest men to represent them. As therefore the democratical or republican part of the government in my opinion is the most important part of the government, and as I have been three times chosen to represent that part, so far am I a re-

As nearly as we can recollect, these were the expressions make use of by Mr. Perry, and these are the expressions that have been twisted from their meaning and made to convey the impression that Mr. Perry declared himself on that day to be a republican. The reason why the Chronicle did not report his speech becomes apparent; it was foreseen that if an incorrect report was published, how easily it could be confuted, and if a correct one had been given, Mr. Cartweight's friends could not then be busily employed, as at present, in the circulation of calumny that a reference to their own political organ would re-

AMERICAN STEAM BOATS.

The new American steam-boat BLACK HAWK, built at French Creek in the winter before last, and which was so unfortunate in the few trips she made last summer, arrived at Kingston on Monday evening, on her first journey this season. She is we hear, intended to be a regular day boat, between Ogdensburgh and this port, touching at the intermediate places, and stopping one night in Kingston and the other night in Ogdensburgh.

She is a handsome well finished vessel of her size, (midway between the Caroline and Kingston,) and her accommodations for passengers are ample and convenient. The engine which is upon the low pressure principle, works up to thirty horse power, and the speed of the boat is from eight to ten knots per hour. The imperfections which retarded her success last summer have (we are informed) been entirely removed, and as nothing is apparently wanting in her equipment, we wish the enterprising owners sufficient success this season, to counterbalance their lass last summer.

The new and splendid Steamer Oswago, which was built summer at the flourishing town of that name, made her ap-Misrance in our harbor this morning, and left for Ogdensburgh authority deserves. at 4 o'clock P. M. She is intended to run on the same route s the United States, and will be going up the Lake while the other is coming down. In size she is rather longer than the vessel just named, but not quite so wide. Her engines are Seen (low necessire) of file house names and and !

are on the same extensive scale as those of the larger lake boatse | and it is therefore time to be up and doing. You and are elegant and convenient; one material improvement we noticed, that of the Ladies' Cabin being below deck. She is private property, and is commanded by an intelligent and gentlemanly man, Capt. Macy. For further particulars see ad-

The CARROLL lying near the above vessel, we went on board and examined her. She appears to have been entirely rebuilt since last season. Her engine is new, low pressure, 45 horse power, and for speed, few houts can touch her. Her river down to Kingston, and can only be explained by re ference to her advertisement. Her accommodations are extremely good for the size of the boat, which is something smaller than the KINGSTON.

The Chronicle tells us, that the rooms over its office are not actually hired for the Mechanics' Institution. Our correspondent, A Mechanic, informed us, that a sub-committee of four gentlemen, all strong H 4 ermanites, had reported to the general committee that the most eligible situation they could meet with, was the rooms immediately over the Chronicle office, and adjoining the intended Tory Reading Room, and that the general committee had authorized the sub-committeee to engage them.' If therefore the rooms have not been engaged, it is to be hoped that a returning glimmer of common sense and decency has prevented an action that must inevitably plunge the infant society into the miseries of party warfare; for so surely as the meetings of the Institution are to be held under the very nose and in the pestilential miasma of ultra toryism, so sure will it sink beneath its withering influence.

The story concerning the son of Mr. Brass being devoured by wolves, turns out to be a mere hoax: we expected as much from the doubtful authority of the originator of this marvellous tale. The young man is among the Indians after fars.

The observation of the Reformer, that the British Whig has quarelle! with the Spectator, is untrue and uncalled-for. In the first number of the Whig, some reflections were made unon its proprietor, but from that day to this, no farther mention of it has been made. The Whig may despise the Spectator, or rather the personal character of its editor, but it has never ye condescended to quarrel with it.

We have the pleasure of recording another triumph gain." by the liberal party at Toronto. The election for Alderman for St. Patrick's Ward, to fill the place of Mr. Rolph, took place on Thursday last, when the Court parasite and Pory honest Dr. Tims, a liberal whig, elected.

Mr. George Rutledge has been appointed by the Commissioners, Clerk of the Court of Requests, for the Loughborough and Portland Division of the County of Frontenac.

Most persons are apt to spy out in others, the fault of which tion as Alderman is not certain. The tories, seeing themselves | they themselves are most guilty. The Chronicle which prior in a minority, made a merit of necessity, and hating the idea of to the assumption of its tails, was generally known by the the assertions of better men than himself, of having Mr. McKenzie being Mayor, waited upon Mr. and its preachers, At the the veracity of the Whie! This is a cock that wont fight, and public meeting in Frontenac in 1832, he publicly ed, since Mr. Rolph had been previously assured by the other as it is a manoevre that has not ever originality to back it, we recommend its discontinuance; assuring our Mandevillian friend, that errors are too apt of themselves to creep into party periodical publications, without having envious rivals to magnify them into wilful mis-statements.

We are given to understand, that the 15th Regiment has re ceived orders to proceed to Toronto, and that the 66th Regiment at that place will relieve it at Kingston.

We shall on Friday do ourselves the honor to notice the Rev. Vicar General's new publication, a copy of which we acknowledge the receipt.

The Troop of Horse Riders, which for the last fortnight had been amusing the Kingstonians, left for Oswego on Monday, in the UNITED STATES.

An Editon's Bribe. -- Some few weeks ago a gentleman (from the other side) who was travelling in the Canadas to procure subscriptions to a Chronological Chart, called upon us triumph as a matter of fact would have been the same, yet it and requested permission to show a copy of his work; a request we cheerfully complied with, and which after inspechave bragged that the Mayor was their choice, and afterwards I tion we promised to notice. Upon leaving the office, it being wrote home to England, that Mr. McKenzie had been rejected | publication day, he desired a copy of the Whig, and tendered a seven penny piece in payment, when the public may judge how high our grateful feelings were excited, by the gentleman' declaring with a condoscending air, as we offered him back man in Upper Canada has been more unjustly calumniated or the three-pence, "you have had a deal of trouble sir, and therefore never mind the change."

. COMMUNICATIONS.

- To the Editors of the Chronicle.

Kingston, 25th April, 1831. Gentlemen-Observing in the British Whig of the 18th inst., and in the Ogdensburgh Republican of the 22d inst., editorial articles strongly animadverting upon me in my official capacity, for having detained the steam-boat United States in this Port, on the morning of the 18th inst., until 10 o'clock because she had on board a few duitable articles, I beg leave to state for the information of the public, some particulars respecting the case, which is knowl to the Editors in queston, have been carefully con

On the first trip of the steam-boat United States this season, I was called on by the master about 5 o'clock, A. M., to take the report of his vessel. I did so; and then told him that although the hours at which his boat was advertised to arrive at this Port were not during the office hours appointed by law, yet I should be happy to afford him, in common with the masters of all other American and British steam-boats, every accommodation in my pow summer. He expressed himself much pleased with the proposed arrangement, and assured me that he did not intend to bring any freight here, but that his principal object was, that his passengers should not be detained beyond the time mentioned in the advertisement. I was not a little surprized, after this conversation, to be called upon by the same gentleman on the next trip of the boat, at about 5 o'clock, A. M., and requested to receive the duties upon some goods which were on board the boat .-Without inquiring what they were, I refused; and as I acted strictly according to law, and he in direct opposition to the arrangement agreed upon between us a few days previous, I conceive no apology is necessary for my conduct on the occasion. I have since been told by him that it was contrary to his wishes that the property was shipped at Oswego; and that he told the owner of it, that the daty would not be received until the office hour oppointed by

For the correctness of the foregoing statement, I Assortment of BONNETS of the above descripappeal to the the Captain of the steam boat United tion, to which he begs leave to call the attention I am, Gentlemen, States.

Your Obedient Servant STAFFORD F. KIRKPATRICK,

Deputy Collector. NOTE BY THE EDITOR .- We have copied Mr. Kirkputrick's explanatory letter, but do not see how it exculpates him from his imputed offence. The law upon the subject makes it imperative for collectors to be in their offices at certain hours, but does not prevent them from attending at any other time; and if therefore Mr. Kirkpatrick chose to detain a vessel above five hours at a very considerable expense, upon an occasion when according to his own account, the dutiable articles were put on board the United States contrary to the Captain's wishes he has only himself to thank for all the exposure (through the whole of the press in the two Canadas and the States of the Union) which such an unwarrantable and arbitrary display o who have had an opportunity of reading the tory papers, must have seen, what a mass pseudography is in circulation for the purpose of souring the minds of the electors towards our worthy representatives, Messrs Bidwell and Perry; men who have risen to high estimation in the minds of every liberal minded person in the province, who has had an opportunity of knowing with what zeal and abihity they have advocated every measure brought route is rather singular, being from the mouth of the Genesee | before the House, that tended towards the welfare | dations, and will commence her trips on Lake Onof the province; and how fearlessly they have ex- tario, for the present season, on the 30th April inst. posed the faltacy of other measures, that appeared and run as follows: to them as only caculated to advance the interest of a few office-seekers and selfish speculators. How many bills have they brought before the House which would have been of the greatest benefit to the province, had they been suffered to have passed into laws, and how many arguments have they used, which would have convinced any persons but those, who were previously determined to oppose every measure of a liberal nature!- It seems that the tory members during the last parliament, have been actuated by the same spirit towards the reform members (Messrs. Balwell & Perry in particular.) hat Mr. G McKenzi: manifested towards the Address to the King, thanking him for Lord Goderich's Dispatch, which was put into his hands at the political meeting at Bath by Mr. Perry, and who Brockville and Morristown, both going to and returafter reading it said, "that he had nothing to say ning from Ogdensburgh, against the Address, but he did not like the source it came from."

With respect to following the recommendation of Mr. McPherson, in electing a member from each party, I wish to ask you, whether we, after having having been for ten years washed in the pure stream of reform, which first issued forth in these counties, are to go back to the wallo'ing in the mire so far as to send a rank tory member to represent us in the next parliament? No! I am convinced you all shudder at the moral degradation of being represented by such a man as John So'omon Cartwright; a man whose political views are at complete variance with those of every well-wisher to his country; a man who is a professed adherent of that party whose sole aim is the gathering together the loaves and fishes, and the dividing of the spoil; a man who, candidate, Mr. Blevins, was defeated by a large majority, and to sum up his imperfections in one word, is a disciple of Christopher Alexander Hagerman!

> Had Mr. Cartwright been a pure man, free from political stain of any kind, he might have had a siender chance of election, at least his presumption in coming forward, would not have been so great as it Leaves Kingston for S. Harbor, Sunday, half-past 1 p. st. now is, coming as be does before you, of whom a great many are Methodists, freshly convicted on branded the methodists as "a set of factious demagogues," and their ministers as, 'itinerant agitators,' 'disaffected busy-bodies," and said that "they neither feared God, man, nor the devil, nor honored the King." He moreover libelled the Christian Gaardian, and did every thing in his power to njure the moral and political reputation of the Me-

Now I ask you, why should Mr. Cartwright wish to represent " a set of factious demagogues." It is because it would affird him a better opportunity of making himself gracious with the Tory Junto at Toronto, by opposing the general wish of the people, in the House of Assembly. This appears to me to be the sole motive of his wishing to go to parliament, and I ask, this motive being known, will a single methodist, who has had an opportunity of seeing the pamphler which contained his speech and his mock petition, (for not content with saying these things, he must afterwards publish them,) aid him in his impious intention by giving him his vote? No! on the contrary, I am certain that every methodist will oppose lim, and support the old members, who have not given a single vote during their parliamentary career, that has not been for the general good of the province.

To conclude, let us use every reasonable exertion to convince our fellow electors of the impropriety of letting a certainty go for an uncertainty, I believe I might safely say, a certainty of future prosperity for a certainty of sad adversity; and let us at the time of the election, be true to those who have been true to us. Let us rally then our forces and give them a triumphant re-election.

Lam Gentlemen, Yours &c. PATRIOT.
