CAREY'S LIBRARY

Choice Literature.

TO say that this is a reading age, implies a desire for instruction, and the means to gravify that desire. On the first point, all are agreed; on the second, there is diversity both of opinion and of practice. We have newspapers, magazines, reviews, in fine pumphlets of all sizes, on nearly all subjects, which have severally their classes of readers and supporters. And yet, copious as are these means of intellectual supply, more are still norded. In addition to the reviews of the day, and passing notices of books, the people, in large numbers, in all parts of our great re-public, crave the possession of the books themselves, and details, beyond mere passing allusion, of the progress of discovery in art and science.— But though it be easy to ascertain and express their wants, it is not so easy to gravify them. Excense, distance from the emporium of literature engrossing occupations which prevent personal application or even messages to libraries and booksellers, are so many causes to keep people away from the feast of reason, and the enjoyment of the coveted literary aliment. It is the aim of the publishers of the Library to obviate these difficulties, and to enable every individual, at a small cost and without any personal effort, to obtain for his own use and that of his favored friend: or family, valuable works, complete, on all the branches of useful and popular literature, and that in a form well adapted to the comfort of the reader.

The charm of variety, as far as it is computible with morality and good taste, will be held constantly in view in conducting the Library, to fill the pages of which the current literature of Great Britain, in all it vairous depages of which the current literature of Great Britain, in all it vairous departments of Biography, History, Travels. Novels and Poetry, shall be freely put under contribution. With, perchance, occasional exceptions, it is intended to give entire the work which shall be selected for publication. When circumstances nuthorize the measure, recourse will be had to the literary stores of Continental Europe, and translations made from French, Italian, or German, as the case may be.

Whilst the body of the work will be a reprint, or at times a translation of entire volumes, the cover will exhibit the miscellaneous character of a Massaying and consist of sketche of men and things, and consist of sketche of men and things.

Magazine, and consist of sketche of men and things, and notices of novelties in literature and the arts, throughout the civilized world. A full and regular supply of the literary monthly and hebdomadal journals of Great Britain and Ireland, in addition to home periodicals of similar character, cannot fall to provide ample materials for this part of our work. The resources and extensive correspondence of the publishers, are the best guarantee for the continuance of the enterprise in which they are now about to embark, as well as for the abundance of the materials to give it value in the eyes of the public As far as judicions selection and ar rangement are concerned, readers will, it is hoped, have reason to be fully estimated, as the editor of the Library is not a stronger to them, but has more than once obtained their favorable suffrages for his past literary
