HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND.

Her Majesty and the Prince Consort left Windsor on Monday morning, Sept. 7th, for the slough station of the Great Western Railway. The royal cortege consisted of three carriages and four. In the first were the Queen and Prince Albert with the Princess Royal.—The second carriage contained the Viscountess Canning, Lady in waiting on her Majesty; Lady Caroline Cocks, Maid of Honor to the Queen; General Wemyss, Equerry in attendance on the Queen; and Colonel Bouverie, Equerry in attendance on his Royal Highness Prince Albert. The third carriage conveyed the attendants upon the royal party. The train reached Paddington about half past seven o'clock. Here other of the royal carriages were in attendance to convey the illustrious tourists forward, and her Majesty having entered the first carriage with the Prince Consort and the youthful Princess, the royal cortege proceeded rapidly across Hyde Park, by Vauxhall Bridge, through Kennington and New Cross to Greenwich, and thence on to Woolwich, entering the gates of the royal dockyard as the clock struck nine. The royal party were accompanied throughout their journey from Paddington by a detachment of the seventeenth Lancers. At five minutes after nine the thunder of the cannon announced her Majesty's departure from the shore, and in a few moments the shouts of the spectators and the hoisting of the royal standard at her mainmast, told of her Majesty being on board the Royal Victoria and Albert. Her Majesty was dressed in black.—Her royal consort Prince Albert handed her Majesty on board the yacht. The Princess Royal, who accompanied her Royal parents on their excursion, was now object of peculiar interest. Viscountess Canning and Lady Caroline Cocks accompanied her Majesty as lady in waiting, and Colonel Bouverie attended the royal party to the yacht, but did not embark with them. The Lord Steward and Sir James Clark, however, accompanied the royal party. Within five minutes of the embarkation of her Majesty the royal fleet was under weigh, and proceeded rapidly to the land of "brown heath and shaggy wood."

At the time the yacht got under weigh to proceed on her destination the weather was unfavorable, so that her Majesty did not remain on deck more than five minutes. His Royal Highness Prince Albert did not go below, but took shelter in the cabin whilst the starboard paddle-box, where he could see the various objects that presented themselves to the yacht pursued her course towards the sea.—The Earls of Aberdeen and Liverpool remained in the above with his royal Highness. Although her Majesty was unaccompanied by any of the Government steamers except the Black Eagle, she was attended by many of the most rapid river boats, which, notwithstanding the unpleasant state of the weather, were filled with company anxious to accompany her Majesty some portion of her voyage. As the yacht neared Stone, she met the lightning steamer, which had conveyed the Prince of Prussia to the Continent, and hove the commander of the latter vessel communicated to the Queen and Prince Albert the safe arrival at his Royal Highness in his own country. At Rochville and Graves-end crowds of people were congregated to testify their loyalty to their sovereign. Some idea of the rapidity with which the royal yacht and her attendant squadron proceeded, may be formed from the time which she took in reaching the Nore.—She left Woolwich at twenty minutes past nine a.m., reached Gravesend at fifty five minutes past ten, and passed the Nore light at ten minutes past twelve, performing the whole distance from Woolwich to the Nore in two hours and fifty minutes, and from Gravesend to the Nore in one hour and fifteen minutes. About ten o'clock the yacht altered her course to the northward and eastward, and proceeded on her voyage to Scotland. The Royal Victoria and Albert steam-yacht, having her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the Princess Royal on board, passed Scarborough on Tuesday morning, about half-past ten o'clock. Mr. Mackay, her Majesty's Highland bagpiper, in full national costume, will accompany her Majesty during the royal progress through the Highlands.

The Royal squadron passed Tynemouth, near North Shields, about half-past two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. To the great disappointment of the spectators, neither Her Majesty nor Prince Albert were on deck, nor could they be observed through the cabin windows. Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, however, acknowledged their loyalty on the part of Her Majesty. The presage from London to Tynemouth effected by the royal yacht is the quickest on record. The distance, 320 miles, was accomplished in about twenty-nine hours. Blair Castle is to be entirely given up to Her Majesty during her stay in Scotland, and Lord Glenlyon has been actively engaged in making preparations for her reception. 200 Highlanders are to form her body-guard. Her Majesty reached the harbour of Dundee about four o'clock on Wednesday morning. As the royal barge approached the shore, it was observed that her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the Princess Royal were seated at the stern, on a handsome couch, and that they were accompanied by the Earl of Haddington and the Earl of Liverpool, Sir R. Peel being absent on account of his indisposition of his daughter. On the barge nearing the landing place it was hailed with the most enthusiastic cheering; and on her Majesty stepping on the gangway, with the infant Princess, the plaudits were resumed, and, spreading to the outer quays, and the streets of the town, re-echoed with an effect absolutely overwhelming. Her Majesty, when she reached the quay, bowed repeatedly to the gentlemen around and bade them "Good morning." Prince Albert also gave the usual courtesy; the royal pair then walked along the quay, arm in arm, Prince Albert leading the Princess Royal by the hand, amid the most enthusiastic shouts of the people. At this moment the scene was singularly striking and impressive. The vessels in the harbor were profusely and gaily decorated with flags, and the yards fully manned by seamen, who sent forth the most resounding cheers, while the appearance of the men standing aloft in such imposing numbers produced a singularly striking effect. On reaching the carriages, the Queen and Prince Albert entered their own carriage, which was open, and the Princess was taken to the carriage following by one of the servants in attendance. The procession went up Castle street, High street, the Nethergate, and Tay street, and the route along the Esplanade, where on her way to Blair Athol, she was received by vast concourses of spectators. The Queen was dressed in a black silk mantle, with black bonnet and feathers. Her Majesty looked more than usually well, and appeared to be in good health. A guard of honor of the 93th regiment was in readiness to receive her Majesty on landing, and parties of the Scots Greys were stationed at intervals of six miles on the road to Blair Athol, with fresh horses from Dundee, in order to escort Her Majesty as she passed before. Her Majesty is expected to return the first week in October, after which time the King of the French is looked for at Windsor.—Leeds Mercury.

THE FOOT RACE, BEACON COURSE, HOBOKEN.

The excitement relative to this race, which several days previous to the time appointed for the race, had reached such a pitch that the Police Authorities deemed it necessary to have a force in attendance to preserve order, was not disappointed. The race came off on Wednesday afternoon, and was witnessed by from 15 to 20,000 persons. The following is the result:

We give below the time of running each mile, and the first three or four who came in. The remainder, including Major Stannard, were behind proportionably, without apparently any hope of winning. The numbers use respectively—No. 1, John Gildersleeve; No. 2, John Barlow. No. 3, John Greenbank; No. 11, John Ross; No. 8, Thomas McCabe.

Nos. 2 and 3 are Englishmen; No. 11 is an Indian.

The following is the running:—

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1st mile, | 11 | 2 | 3 | | Time, 5.15 |
| 2d " | 2 | 3 | 11 | 7 | 5.30 |
| 3d " | 2 | 3 | 11 | 7 | 5.30 |
| 4th " | 2 | 3 | 11 | 1 7 | 5.45 |
| 5th " | 2 | 3 | 11 | 1 7 | 5 15 |
| 6th " | 2 | 3 | 1 | 11 7 | 5.45 |
| 7th " | 2 | 3 | 1 | 11 7 | 5.30 |
| 8th " | 2 | 3 | 1 | 11 7 | 6.45 |
| 9th " | 2 | 3 | 1 | 11 7 | 6.00 |
| 10th " | 2 | 3 | 1 | 11 | 5.15 |
| ½ mile & 75 yds 1 | | 3 | 2 | | 3.00 |

The Indian won the first mile; but afterwards he fell behind, and he did not hold the 9th, when Gildersleeve passed him. The two Englishmen ran within a foot or two of each other during the whole race, and at the end of the tenth mile were about 100 yards ahead of Gildersleeve. After passing the stand, Gildersleeve passed both Nos. 2 and 3, and won the money, making 10½ miles and 75 rods in the hour. The two Englishmen ran nearly the half mile over, and stopped before the time was up, finding they could not win. This is we believe unprecedented running. Gildersleeve did not appear to be fatigued. He is a young man, a chair gilder, and a member of the N. Y. fire department.

The Indian, Ross, came fourth on the last round. He continued after the heat was out, and ran over 11 miles in about 3 minutes over the hour. He fell upon coming to the stand, but whether from accident or weakness we could not learn.

Major Stannard completed his tenth mile just within the hour and stopped. There was a handsome purse and six ahead of him. The number that went to the 9th and 10th mile was not as large as was anticipated. The last were much separated toward the end of the race, but it was difficult to tell on which mile some of them were running, but we believe that as many as two got into the tenth mile.

TEXAS.

The rumor that Anson Jones, the Houston candidate, is elected President of the Republic by a majority of from eight to thirteen hundred votes, is confirmed by later advices.

The U. S. steamer Poinsett, Lieut. Pell, which left Pensacola with Dall Green on the 27th ult. was brought to anchor off Velasco on the 28th, it having been found that the water was giving way. Gen. Green landed and proceeded to Galveston. He then applied to Winslow Foster, the commander of the U. S. revenue cutter Woodbury, for a passage, who on the 1st inst. despatched her to Vera Cruz with the General. Captain Foster himself repaired to New Orleans in the steamer Republic, which arrived there from Galveston on the 7th inst.

The Texian brig of war Wharton, being in an unsound condition, was run ashore, and now lays on her beam ends, on the flat opposite Galveston.

A council was to be held with the Waco and Cumanche Indians, about the middle of the present month, on the Upper Brazos. Gen. Houston intended to be present in person, and it was hoped a complete pacification with these warlike tribes would be effected. The Indians de Solms (a Polish nobleman, at present on a visit to Texas for the purpose of forming a colony with his suit, intend to accompany President Houston.

COUNTY OF ESSEX.

To the Editor of the Western Express.

THE PARK FARM,
Sandwich, Monday, Oct. 14th, 1844.

The moment your leading article in last Saturday's paper, under the title of "Shameful Exposé," caught my eye, I knew it to be an atrocious falsehood concocted by my political enemies, and by them imposed on you, as I believed. I now call on you to deliver me to the eyes of its author, [illegible] that both Major Lachlan and Mr. Wingfield were in possession of [illegible] letters which that [illegible] to [illegible] me. I also asked of them, to apply to [illegible] Mr. William Duncan Dick, that they should immediately contradict the statement. They did so; and I send you a copy of their letters to me.

FROM MAJOR LACHLAN TO ME.

October 13th, 1844.

DEAR SIR:—Having seen in "The Western Express" of yesterday an editorial article headed "Shameful Exposé," and reflecting in strong language upon yourself in reference to the contest going on between Mr. Wingfield and me as candidates for the representation of this County in the ensuing Parliament, and having particularly noticed that in the article it is asserted, that at a meeting held at Amherstburg on Tuesday last, at which Mr. Wingfield and I attended, "Mr. Wingfield produced a letter from Mr. Prince, which was read and proved to be "verbatim et literatim" the same as one addressed to Major Lachlan, promising his support, with a slight difference, which [illegible] gentleman at Mr. Prince's residence, was a mere trifle, that is, that Mr. Wingfield [illegible] Secretaryship of the late ministry, while to that to the Major the [illegible] Colonial Secretary Sir Charles Metcalfe, &c.

I beg leave to [illegible] you that the article is [illegible] and to [illegible] you, that I am [illegible] to make it [illegible] you, and the world [illegible] as you please, as I am [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] you [illegible] to [illegible] you [illegible] to [illegible] you [illegible] to
