THE MARINER'S REST. BY WILLIAM JONES.

Down, down in the deep let the mariner sleep, When his voyage of life is ended; He cares not to rest in the earth's warm breast, Let his manes with the wave be blended: For there was his home, and the crested foam, That long hath gallantly bore him, Will shelter him now, while murmoring low,

With the winds, a requiem o'er him. And there doth he rest, in his shrouded nest, Unconscious of all above him; The battle may wage, or the tempest rage, But the sounds no longer move him! On his coral bed, with the sea-weed spread, He lies, till the great Awaking Shall stir old ocean, in wild commotion, And the mariner's trance be breaking.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT. HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY

From the Montreal Herald.

FRIDAY, January, 17, 1845. Mr. GRIEVE presented a petition from Three Rivers, praying the House to address the Governor General, to cause a survey to be made of the River St. Lawrence below that parish, by the Board of Works; with a view to the construction of Mr. Lafontaine, Mr. Colville, and Mr. posed the motion, on the ground that the public funds ought not to be employed for works which concerned only two parishes; and, because he thought, that in such cases as the present, parties interested ought to make a survey at their own expense, before asking the House to interfere and grant money.
