THE ANNEXATION OF TEXAS.

The Albang Evening Journal, one of the ablest and most influential papers in the State of New York, has the following article on this iniquitous measure. It was written before the resolutions had finally passed the Senate, but does not lose any this itinerant individual, this presumptuous cenof its force on that account. We give it to show the antagonism that exists amongst our neighbors themselves on the subject, and merely premise that the Journal is well known to express the opinion of the people of the New England States on the Annexation question.

"This measure more disgraceful than any that has yet blackened the annals of American legislation, is to be pressed, we fear, to a successful issue to-day or to morrow. The joint resolutions, passed by the House of Representatives, which propose to admit Texas as a Slave State, with the privilege of hereafter subdividing herself into five separate the advices from Washington. It was known, pile of the liquid, were operated to the form and principle of the joint resolutions, and that alone allow and Tuppan of Ohio had been instructed to vote against them. Any one of three Senutors voting with the Whige, ensured the defeat of the House Resolutions. There was abundant ground, therefore, for the conviction, so generally entertained and expressed, that the nojust and unconstitutional plan of unnegation, adopted by the House,
