AMBETH STREET POLICE OFFICE Lake Ward, who was dressed in the uniform of the 43rd Regiment of Infantry was charged before Mr. Norton with an act of vagrancy, by begging in the public street.

Police constable William Cockerell, 108 L, deward, that he found the prisoner begging in the Lower-marsh, Loudeth, and the singularity of a soldier asking for alms in the public street keying caused a crowd of people to amenable around him mento obstruct the public way, he felt it to be

In reply to the charge, the primmer gave the following beiof history of his life and persent sufferings: -" His father, Michael Ward, who, he said, was a native of the town of Tries, in the ounty of Merch, calisted in the 49th Regiment of feet when a young man, and after serving in that regiment in surings parts of the globe was ensuined off as a arrgeant in 1829, and died in his native town of Trim in 1839. During the period of his father's service, his (prisoner's) three brothers, who, as well as himself, had been born in the regiment, enlisted into the army: his beother Thomas went into the 47th, became a pergeant in the band, and master of the adult school, and died in India in 1939. His brother Peter also enlisted into the 43th, and was discharged in 1838, having lost the night of the right eye and very nearly that of the other, and was allowed a pension of Is, u-day. Michael, a third brother, enlisted into the 86th Regiment, in which he was at present serving in India, and he (the primner) entirted at Trim, in September 1839, mmediately after the death of his father, into the 43d Light Infantry. He accompanied the regiment to Canada, where he was attacked with a white swelling of the right knee, and after being in an hospital for 12 months, was obliged to have The BILLS OF FARE, the WINES, the BATHS, the CARRIAGES and the | the limb amputated a little above the injured part. at Quebec, in January, 1845. In the month of October in the same year he arrived at Chatham and was then discharged on a pension of 6d a day for 18 months. He understood, he said, from the surgeon who attended him that the loss of a log above the knee, or an arm above the elbow, would certainly entitle him to at least In. a-day pension, and therefore expected that sum; and ap-nouncement that he was to bave :6d. a-day, and that unly for 18 months, had much disappointed rence is distinctly seen from almost him. Be petitioned the Commissioners at Cheleen an interval of four mouths they consented to the pension continuing for six months longer. This period expired three months ago, and since that time he had been reduced to the greatest possible privations, and compelled as a last resource to are as moderate as any other Hotel in bog." The poor fellow here handed in his discharge and other documents, which bore out his statement to the follow extent. He also handed in certificates signed by the Colonel of the regiment and others, representing his conduct and character to have been of the very best descrip-

In reply to the questions of Mr. Norton, the monor, said he had forwarded his payors to the Commander-in-Chief, and had received a reply from Lord Fitzroy Somerset, stating that though his Grace considered his case a bard one, he bad not the power to do anything for him, as such power rested wiely in the Commissioners at Chelsea Hospital. The prisoner further stated, that on enlisting he described Trim to be his birthplace, but he had since ascertained that he had been been in the Isla of Wight, while his father's regiment was there. He had been latterly stop-Kingston, 28th April, 1818. 35-tf ping with his brother Peter, who was then in

> The brother was then called forward, and stated that he assisted his brother as well as be ould, but the night of his left eye having become much weakened, and the right eye entirely lost to him, he and his wife were obliged to shift as well as they could upon his pension of Is. a-day. He added that there were very few families who contributed five of their members to the service and defence of their country as theirs had, and lought the Government ought to do something for his brother. For his own part, be bad on reason to complain of the Government, as he thought it had done all it could for him, and he did hope that something would be done for his poor brother if he could only find some gentleman of influence to take up his case.

> Mr. Norton supposed the reason for withholding pension in their case was from the circumstance of the prisoner having lost his fimb from natural saures, and not by accident or while in battle But whether it had been lost in the one way or in the other, its deprivation was the same to the poor man. He (Mr. Norton) thought that the fact of the whole family having devoted themselves to the service of their country was a circumstance which entitled the primer's case to a favorable consideration; and he should therefore recoons and that full representation of the case be drawn up and forwarded with the documents procured, to the the general rule.

The poor fellow replied, that be was quite incapable of drawing up such a statement bisnself, and had not a farthing to pay others for doing it. Upon which tatement and forward it to Chelen, and further drained that 10s. be given from the poorbox for the unfortunate man's present relief. The poor fellow sermed so overpowered with the kindness which he had experienced as to be scarcely able to express his gratitude.

simpelf to any elem of printing; but, while he has selected those earlier works to which time has given a stamp, he has shown arel and discornment in the petronage of rising talent. Works by Reynolds and Gainshorough will be found with those of the exhibitors of the latest years. The great aim les been to select speciment from al the British painters of eminence. Wilkie, Landseer, Ifdian, Calcutt, Turnes, Esty, T. & Cosper, Leslie, Stanfield, Jones, Bird, Stodthard, Mulroady, Eastlake, Macline, Linnell, Word, &c . all bave a plane, so that the collection is really an historical record of British painting from the time of Reynolds to the present day. In the selection of the particular works that are to stand forth as specimens of their several artists Mr. Vernon has aluren admirable discomment.-He has brought together what may be considered a collection of " types." There are the most excellent specimens of Landscer's animal painting. the richest specimens of flesh coloring by Esty; Turner, both in the time when he was as distinct as Canaletti and when he was in a misty state of "Turnerism ;" exquisito toblecus de geure, by Mulready; Stanfield's most striking waterpieces; Callesti's landscapes, remarkable for their sober time and color; Linnell's distinguished by power and effect ; Corper's " Cuppish cows;" the most characteristic crostines by Leslie; the Ho. garthian productions of Ward. Many of the pictures have long made the fortunes of the printsellers, and are familiar through the medium of engraving to every well furnished house. To name a few of the works would be injudicates. There is nothing in the collection without its value as a representation of a class of ort, and the classes are such that every aminest artist to included. The only useful enumeration would be a reprint of the very excellent catalogue which is distributed in the rooms. It may be mentioned that the whole of the gallery is to be engraved in the like masser by the most emineut British engravers.

In the year 1773, Peter Barrell, Esq., of Beckenham, in Kent, whose strength was rapidly declining, was advised by his physicians to go to Spa for the recovery of his braith. His daughters feared that those who had only motives entirely mercenary would not pay him that attention which he might expect from these who, from duty and effection united, would feel the greatest pleasure in ministering to his case and comfort; they, therefore, resolved to accompany him. They proved that it was not a spirit of disripation and guicty that led them to Spa, for they were not to be seen in any of the gay and fashinnsble circles: they were never out of their father's ompany, and never stirred from home except to attend him, either to take the air, or drink the waters : in a word, they lived the most reclose life in the midst of a town then the resert of the most illustrious and fashionable personages of Europe. This exemplary attention to their father procured these three amiable sistem the admira-

" Like a mowy dove trooping with crows." Jenny Lind's beauty is the triumph of expression, the power which the soul boasts to make beauty to create out of the unpromising. Lind's is a divided being, one part of the south, the other of beaven. Never was there a happier expension than that the eyes are the windows of the soul, and Jenny Lind's eyes are the windows through which her beautiful mind looks out upon the world.
