AN INCIDENT OF THE COURT. -That the courts of modern days have not yet relaxed their stern rules as to the costume in which Chief Justice Richards. A certain young lawyer was conducting the defence in a crimthe court listened to his remarks. Having concludeded to his own satisfaction, he awaited the Chief Justice's Plumes, Flowers & Millinery, English and reply with an incipient assurance of A LARGE STOCK OF success lighting his comely features. His equanimity was however terribly disturbed by the Bench in its gravest tones observing, "Mr ty. The terrible truth flashed upon his mind Wellington Street, Kingsten, necktie instead of the regulation "white choker." A happy thought struck him, and for a moment a gleam of hope again lit up his Crime, and who is remourning," but the Court ruthlessly ignored the explanation, and the learned gentleman was obliged to retire and remodel his costume in accordance with court etiquette.
