Creder ston 1835, was President of the old Com- | tials and salary, required. mercial Bank of Canada, which institution, under his able financial management, "went up like a rocket and came down like a stick." From this it is claimed by his friends that he is an acknowledged expert in Finance Later, through the assistance of several able writers, he succeeded in publishing a little Primmer, which no person ever took the trouble to read, on the Militia affairs of Canada. Still later, he delivered a most terrific address in the House on the finanof the country, had a most depressing effect, J. Bawden. fortunately, however, the country survived that incipid outburst of financial ignorance and imbecility, yet after its delivery, this gentleman was further acknowledged to be the wildest visionary in the House.

He has been in in Parliament as member for Lennox and Addington, and recently for Lennox only, since 1863. The electors know how its election at each contest was secured and how many thousands each respective Originally he was a Conservative and a supporter of the Macdonald Cartier Administration. This line of policy he pursued until Sir Francis Hircks was chosen Finance Minister, a berth he then aspired to.
