the previous evening, showed him his letters | ress T. WILLIAM & CO., South Eighth from his father ("the Earl of Granville") and presented the merchant with his neatly printed card. When his fellow clerks entered they too were presented with his "card," and let into the secret. This went on very well until last Saturday, when Lord Granville received a letter from home, accompanied with a shilling piece, which he exlained was an intimation that he was forever cut off from any claim to his father's estate. This was followed by another letter from the Earl repenting of the rash steps he had taken, and limiting the time of receiving anything from the estate to five years. Wednesday this letter was followed by ancther, which stated that his father would allow him £300 per quarter. This remarkable quick change of circumstances caused the merchant and his fellow-clerks to suspect that everything was not right.

ed, the merchant sent his book-keeper to H's Excellency the Governor-General, was, in re ply to enquiry as to whether he had received a visit from Lord Granville, said he had never known such a man in Cana'a. When the clerk returned with that information, two polic. men were sent for, who paid a visit to Evans, and elicited from him the fact that he was an imposter, assuming the name of Lord Granville oaly for fun. After the pol cemen had vacated his boarding-house, Evans procured a revolver and decided to "shui e off his mortal coil." He was prevented from committing the rash act by the intervention of the merchant, who fearing that something of that nature might occur, visited him at his boarding house in time to prevent the deed, In endeavouring to take the revolver from Evans one of the barrels went off. The bullet fortunately passed upwards through the ceiling without injury to ! any person. The young man was soon quieted down and convinced of his folly. Yesterday morning he presented himself at the store of the merchant and asked for a settlement. He was greeted by his fellow cierks on all sides as he entered, who bowed most gracefully and addressed him as "my Lord" and "your lordship." He wouldn't "lordship" worth a cent, however, and gave them the cold shoulder every time they approached him. He came to the shop for his money, not to be insulted, and wouldn't be tantalized. His termenters remarked they were "doctors," and they kept poking fun at him for some time. Finally they ceased to tease him, and the merchant paid him his wages and discharged him. He has since left for other climes, where he can continue to be Lord Granville until another denouement puts a veto to his performance.

The young ladies who have been so foolish as to allow their names to be mixed up so publiely with that of an adventurer, are now repenting their felly, and some of them will no doubt find it difficult to get rid of the title "Lady Granville." - Ottawa Citizen. - [We be-] fieve such a character as the above was not unknown in the village of Trenton a few years
