"IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE."

There are many conspicuous examples c' great wealth accumulated solely by means of persistent advertisement of the merits of a simple and common place article. There are other examples of riches acquired by the like of a worthless nostrum. While all who advertise do not grow rich, and some do not deserve to do so, there is no man engaged in a LEGITIMATE BUSINESS, the success of which depends upon the extent to which publie patronage is given to it, who can afford to dispense with a liberal use of
