TUESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 15.

To-day being the centennial anniversary of honour of Scott will be laid in the Central Park. Wherever the English language is read there are admirers of the genius of Scott; and though this admiration may not everywhere be able to obtain expression in public show, yet the centenary of the great poet and novelist will be duly honoured by FIRE. - A fire broke out about four o'clock those who have feasted in rich repast on the creations of his genius.

Mark Auburn, a poor Englishman, resolved to come to America, but he lacked the money for a passage. While the ship Idaho was at Liverpool, Auburn secreted himself in the hold, and after she had got to sea he was discovered and taken on deck. He told the story of poverty. The sympathy of the sailors was excited and they gave him food, and he was permitted to remain on deck. As there is said to be a law, however, in Great Britain against stowaways, the captain of the Idaho resolved to return Auburn to England for punishment, and when the vessel arrived in this port he ordered Auburn to be locked up in a little room.
