The numerous strikes which are so continually recurring in all depart. ments of industry where master and workmen come in contact, indicate serious defects in the system at present pursued. Last spring when the agitation of the nine hours' movement began, it was suggested, in the columns of the Toronto between capital and labour, there is an entire want of community of interest. The workmen has no concern beyond the 'earning of his daily wages, and the masters ebject is to reduce the wages to a miminum, in order that the amount of profit may be as large as possible. The interest of the capitalist, in point of fact, is made antagonshould be a community of interest, is productive of most injurious results to both parties, and to society at large.
