From the case of Spain I pass to the case of

England. There for the present I content myself with a brief explanation. On this subject J have never broken silence except with pain, and I hope not to say anything now which shall augment difficulties, although, when I consider how British anger was aroused by an effort in another place, judged by all who heard it most pacific in character, I do not know that even these few words may not be misinterpreted. There can be no doubt that we received from England This is by Montreal time, from which deduct an incalculable wrong-greater I often said, 121 minutes for the difference between Montreal than was ever before received by one civilized Power from another short of unjust war. I do not say this in bitterness, but in sadness. There can be no doubt that, through English compli Arrive. | city, our carrying trade was transferred to Engwhile England gained what we lost; our block-East and West night trains 9:00 " 7:00 A.M. ade rendered more expensive, and generally that our war, with all its fearful cost of blood and national life, and it was done in support of rebels whose single declared object of separate existence as a nation was slavery, being in this respect clearly distinguishable from a power where slavery is tolerated without being made the corner stone. Such is the case. Who shall fix the measure of this great accountability? For the present it is enough to expose it. I make no demand—not a dollar of money—not a word of apology. I show simply what England has done to us. It will be for her to determine what reparation to offer. It will be for the American Oc people to determine what reparation to require, On this head I content myself with the aspiration that out of it may come some enduring c safeguard for the future, some landmark of hu-

121c settlement until our case in its full extent has 121c been heard. In all controversies the first stage of justice is to understand the case; and, soon-121c er or later, England must understand ours. The English arguments, so far as argument can b found in the recent heats, have not in any respect impaired the justice of our complaint. Loudly is it said that there can be no sentimental damages or damages for wounded feelings. and then our case is dismissed as having nothing but this foundation. Now, without undertaking to say that there is no remedy in the case sup-10c posed, I wish it understood that our complaint 15c is for damages traced directly to England. If soc the amount is unprecedented, so also is the Subscribers residing in Britain, United Wrong. The scale of damages is naturally in among us doubts that these damages were received? The records show how our commerce suffered, and witnesses without number testify how the war was prolonged. Ask any of our great Generals-ask Sherman, Sheridan, Thomas, Meade-ask Grant. In view of this great wrong it is a disparagement of international law to say that there is no remedy. An eminent English Judge once pronounced from the bench that "the law is astute to find a remedy;" but no astuteness is required in this case-nothing applied at Batchelor's Wig Factory, No. 16 Parcel Post ..... per 8 oz 121c but simple justice.
