THE FIRST DIVISION.-THE OTTA-WA GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED. The Opposition in the House of Commons took occasion on Friday to try their strength with the Government on the West Peterboro' election case. Led by Mr Blake, they out a reference of points in dispute to Committee. This the Government opposed. An able discussion took place, in which several of the leading men of the House engaged. A division was taken shortly before midnight, when the Government was sustained by a majority of 16 in a house of 172 members. For the Government, 95; against, 79. Had the House been full, and several members from the Maritime Provinces, Manitoba and British Columbia, who were unavoidably absent, been present, the

The result is a great damper upon the Opposition's spirits. With that fatuity which is peculiar to them they were confident of success. Telegrams arrived in town last evening in rapid succession, asserting positively that the Opposition would succeed. The vote considerably elongated their faces. They now know that "their cake is dough," that the Government may fairly count upon a good majority, and that sustained as they have been upon the first important division of the session, many members who were partially committed to cast the first vote against them will now be found giving them a generous support. And thus ends the boastful Grit pro-

THE PACIFIC RAILWAY CORRESPON-The irregular and non-official publication of us to believe in the super-excellent patriotism of railway contractors; especially when they had just formed a ring in the Legislature to: enter into a contract with the Government;

It is admitted that the late Mr Alfred Wadington, the projector of this railway, did at that some member of the Government, being JUST RECEIVED, by Allan Steamer, via in Montreal, mentioned the fact to Sir Hugh Portland, a select assortment of the Newest Allan, whereupon the latter, without as ap pears consulting Mr Waddington, hastened to New York to make a connection with these Americans himself. But these negotiations, it is said, ended before the charter was grant-entirely to the question of uniting the two eriginal companies into one; and therefore possesses only a subordinate interest, as not deal. ing with any question actually in existence When Mr Macpherson refused to join the Allan organization, the Macpherson companfell to pieces; and some of its more influential members joined Sir Hugh Allan in the new company. Mr Cumberland and Mr Walter Shanly had loyally followed Mr Macpherson to defeat; but after that act of bootless chivalry, and when it had become a question of sauve qui peut, they bethought themselves of a more practical course. Nor did they go alone; Mr McInnes, of Hamilton, and Mr John Wal. PROTECTORS. Mr McInnes, of Hamilton, and Mr John Wal. ker, of London, went with them into the new direction. It is difficult to tell how many others who belonged to the Macpherson c For Ladies and Gentlemen with Weak pany before its breakup have become adheren' of the Canadian Pacific Company, enveloped as it is with the loadstone of a contract, in litical complexion and its voting power, in both Houses, and that he did not allow considere tions arising out of the obligations under which a Senator, by whom that organization was form. ed, had brought him, to influence his conduct in the discharge of a public duty. When the Macpherson company appealed to its popularity, it was the same as saying that it was too strong to be resisted. No Legislative ring formed with the avowed purpose of entering into a contract with the Government could possibly be popular; and there is no source to which the diminution of ministerial strength in Ontario is so strictly traceable as the granting of charters, whereby the Government was empowered to enter into a contract with companies containing a large number of members of Parliament. So evident had this become that the Government was obliged to alter its tactics and refuse to admit any member of Parliament to be a director in the contractor's the correspondence between the Government at Ottawa and the Pacific Railway companies chartered last Session, although adding little to what was previously known, will be a nine days wonder, if the interest in negotiations that failed can be kept up so long. Though they form a contribution to the history of the question, the documents are utterly worthless for historical purposes. We have to look, not to the statements of the companies but to their objects to get at the truth. Each BRUSHES of all descriptions, &c., &c., company wanted the contract; but one, the Allen company, was willing to unite with the At James S. Yarker's. other, according to a suggestion made to both oy the Government; while the Macpherson PRINCESS STREET company, strong in numbers rather than capital, and counting among its active members a large number of Senators and members of the House of Commons, relied on strength of its political organization for success. It inscribed on its banners all or nothing, in full confidence that the Government would not dare to deal with a rival organization. The pretext for refusing to join the other company was the thinnest possible disguise: that its rivals were less Canadian less national, less patriotic, and that they had in view the diabolical object of throwing the whole thing into the hands of Americans, and making our Pacific Railway a branch of the Northern Pacific. No proof of the charge was offered by those who made it, while it was met by a direct denial by those against whom it was brought. It is really too much to ask
