The Lewis and Kennebec Railway Comwhen Mr Huntingdon gave his warning note which was quelled in inglorious death without a word being said either for or against. Then e'er twenty-four hours had elapsed Sir John A. Macdonald gave his notice of motion, and the challenge he then threw down has kept matters lively ever since. The Committee now found that they could proceed when the time to do so seemed fairly arrived, but again there were two sides to the question, and the Government adopted in self-defence the line of po | Mary's. licy which was the best for all in the cir cumstances. The Hon. member who appears as accuser takes a very strange me- ville. thod of conducting his case. He has made a bread and plain charge but he has not Very Rev. Vicar General G. A. He is afraid, or else cannot lay down anything in the nature of a direct charge, and being a Queen's Counsel we should hardly convict him of ignorance onthis point. · His first move was certainly an extraor dinary one. He-wished Sir Francis Hincks to be examined first. Now it is certainly somewhat unusual for a public prosecutor to call upon a man on trial to give evidence to convict himself, and yet this is just what Mr Huntingdon very moderately asks. The whole ministry is on its trial, and yet the modest proposal is made to examine them first, and then lay down the line of proof against them. If Mr Huntingdon can staff. prove his case at all, he must have other witnesses upon whom he can rely, and one would naturally expect that these would have been called first. So soon as the Premier saw the line of action to be pursued, he came forward to circumvent it, and thus compel Mr Huntingdon to make part of the accused to have allowed them- crated this altar to the honour of St. Joseph, selves to be tricked into a false position by etc." tion time to frame an indictment from the evidence they could gain in a most surreptitious manner.
