Of the service in the church the Gazette says : The celebrant of this part of the ceremony was the Venerable Abbe Bayle, Superior of the Seminary of St. Sulpice. Bayle, who is now in his 70th year, was the professor of Sir George, when he attended the classes of Montreal College some forty | 'ar to a hare. years ago. The deceased baronet ever retained the sincerest respect and regard for his Acheen. old master, and on one occasion, when he visited the institution with Lord Monck, he publicly recalled how much the lessons and bodily corrections of the Abbe had served to folks. the development of his character. In his will he left a clause that M. Bayle would be pleased to chant his funeral service, and it would have been done had it not been decided by Mgr. Bourget that, owing to the eminence of the deceased, this duty should be performed by one more elevated in the sacerdotal hierarchy. Henco it was that Mgr. Fabre, brother-in-law of Sir George, was designated to fultil that sacred office. Out of deference to the dead statesman, and in memory of old times, Abbe Bayle, on Friday, rose from his sick bed and received the remains of his former pupil into that church before whose altar he had so often knelt.
