Parisian Correspondence.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, June 18. Anything excellent that the present ministry may produce will be regarded as a surprise, and if it but continue in the wake of M. Thiers, no person will be astonished. Having no wirtness as yet to score, its defects, after an existence of three weeks. are as satisfactory as its opponents could desire. Foreign powers have been informed by a Circular Letter that France is a hot bed of agitation, a world-disturbing kingdom, and. hence, must be vigorously checked. Thiers was more patriotic, was to his coun try's faults a little blind, and not to her virtues very kind. Besides, foreign aggression was an appanage of the First and Second Empire. The Republic of 1849 did myade Rome, a fault the French liberals to this lay regret ; but the monarchists would resume the work to-morrow, only events forbid. The ministry being composed of doctrinaires, professing, among other virtues too numerous to mention, political purity, explains why their first great step towards the resteration of "moral order," was an attempt to corrupt. in the most wholesale and barefaced manner, the provincial press. A subordinate has been dismissed for this daring attempt at venality subordinates are generally the scape-goats in such atlairs; but they become men of ability if the scandal be not detected, and ne one was innocent enough to expect that the ministers would voluntarily come forward and avow their misconduct ; indeed some persons believe they would have had no objection to enjoy the success of the bribery and corruption. But then all governments in France attempt the same; differ only in degree and ability to The imprepriety has shocked the allies who support the model cabinet, and the country feels the same, and in addition notes. To remove the effect of this awkwar blunder, suggested almost to a certainty the prosecution of the new deputy for Lyons, Rane, for connection with the Commune in tery why this same M. The attitude of the Republicans is very satisfactory: they will not erect a barricade, will not drag their coats, Donnybrook-Fair fashion, will afford no accasion for their opponents to strike.
