if we help one another Along the path of life. Each be to each a brother Through quiet and through strife, Our hopes will shine the brighter, Our hopes will be the lighter, If we help one another.

Though sorrow's clouds may gather, The sky is still above; Though it be stormy weather The sun will constant prove, And every shadow banish, The mists will surely vanish. If we help one another,

Life hath its meed of sorrow, And all must have their share ; fo-day there's joy, to-morrow May bring its load of care . But trouble will be lightened, And happiness be brightened, If we help one another,

Then let us help each other, And do all good we can Each to each a brother Through all of life's brief span; For hearts will be the lighter, The world be better, brighter, If we help one another.
