THE AUTHOR'S ADVERTISEMENT. I F the improvement of the mind has been a I the great object of attention in the var ous departments of science, literature and the arts, from the remotest period in the history of mankind up to the present, and if such an 19th .- Steamer Lady, Cape Vincent, ardent desire for cultivating those morat exed fifteen kegs butter. Schooner Forwarder, cellencies which adorn and beautify the mind Oswego, 98,490 feet sawed lumber, 322 have existed from the earliest records of time. it surely cannot be considered a theme unworthy of our attention to bestow some regard to an act that has for its object the adorning of our persons with suitable, graceful and well fitted garments. In presenting to my professional brethren a error and default. In order, then, to remedy the difficulty, and to obviate the old clumsy method of cutting by measurement of tape lines and graduated scales, &c., I have laid down such practical Rules as will enable the merest tryo in the art of our profession to cut a garment with exactness and precision, with.

out hazard of mistake. In the first part of the work I have endeavored to explain, firstly, the relative proportion which one part of the body bears to an'other. Secondly the difference existing in diagrams with rules and definitions explanatory of the whole, with as much brevity and perspicuity as possible. This last, in particular, I would earnestly impress on the minds of my readers to study with assiduity and care; preparatory to their entering on the duty of their calling.
