The Late Murder.

The following evidence will throw some additional light on this sad transaction.

Denison Lewis, circusman, examined by Mr. O'Reilly .- Is connected with a small show travelling with the circus, and lives in Norwich, Connecticut, when at home ; knows prisoner by the name of " Rover ;" saw him on the last night of the circus-thinks it was after eleven o'clock; did not see deceased that night; saw no row up to the time of the circus coming out; as soon as the circus was out, witness opened his small show; there was quite a crowd of people about, many whom went into the show-those outside. were very unruly, and witness was afraid they would cut the ropes and let the cauvass and poles fall on these inside; one rope was cut; if two or three ropes had been cut the canvass and poles might fall in and perhaps kill some of those within; the crowd outside might cut the ropes and do harm; in consequence of this he closed the show about a quarter of an hour earlier than usual; the crowd soon after dispersed; after witness got his canvass down he saw two men about two rods from him; one of them said to the other " what are you following me about for thinks it was " Rover" said so-witness has his back to them and could not be sure which said it; the other replied he was not following him, and the other replied he was; both men were talking loud; thinks it was " Ro ver" then said you are a d-d liar. prisoner then asked the deceased what business had be on the ground at that hour, and deceased replied it was none of his business, and neked the prisoner what business had he there; the prisoner replied he had business. and the deceased said so had he; witness next heard McAleer say what do you want with me; both spoke as if they were angry and inclined to fight, and stood close to each other; they next appeared to be going back a couple of rods fighting as they went back they did not go back straight, but at about ness first observed them; saw one of then fall and the other as if fall with him or over him; one of them got up to run, but only got two or three rods when he was surrounded witness did not know which ran or which was caught, or who caught him; heard the cry of murder just before the crowd surrounded the man that ran. William Connell, Circus-man, examined Mr. O'Reilly .- Recollects the last night the circus; saw the man that was kill quarrelling with the boss canvass-man, about eleven o'elock; the boss canvass-man, whose proper name is Augustus Milhone, asked the deceased to leave, as he did not want to have any one about the waggons after dark; the deceased replied that he had as much right there as he, and that if he would come to Mayer of the city he would show him that had; Milhone replied that he did not want have anything to do with him, and advised him to go home; deceased said he would not go, and that he could give one whistle that would raise a crowd that would run the waggons into the lake-that it was done to a and the other asked the same question, and would not say what they were; heard deceas-

The Cameronians,

We regret to learn that the bad-blood, which this egument has raised egainst themselves is likely to break out into serious trouble it is not removed. On Saturday evening, the band, at the request of the Lessee, played in this he was struck by a bystander, but nothing more happened. Had it not been for the excellent management of Mr. Buckland, and the great good feeling towards his compan among the citizens, things might have been worse. The band will not be asked to attend again, so harmony will reign as usual.
