

THOUSAND ISLAND BOATS,
By Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg RR.
New York.
Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, and all points in Northern New York via
S.R.R. and N.Y. Central Railways.

T. HANLEY, General Ticket Agent.

VOL. XXXVI.

The Kingston Daily News.

KINGSTON, CANADA, FRIDAY, APRIL 29, 1887.

THE VERY LATEST NEWS.

CAUGHT FROM THE WIRES AND CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

The Montreal and Britannia football teams begin field practice to-morrow.

The shipwrights of Belfast have struck for weekly instead of fortnightly payment.

After a residence of seven years in government house, Hon. John Beverley Robinson and family have moved out and taken up quarters at the Queen's hotel where they will sojourn till they go to their summer home up north.

Arrangements have been made for an old and new contest, for a purse, next week between Jim Carney and Martin Snee. The best man of his weight in New England, Snee will weigh twelve pounds more than Carney.

M. Pace, editor of the Bucharest, Lupita, has been sentenced in his absence, to two years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $1,000 for describing the King of Roumania as an egoist, an adventurer and an enemy of his country.

Oil portraits of all the members of the Prussian Foreign Ministry are being painted. The pictures are intended for a present to Queen Victoria from the German ministers of London on the occasion of her majesty's jubilee.

It is semi-officially stated in the Vatican, being informed that Francis is desirous of resuming good relations with the pope, will appoint a commission of leading ecclesiastics to study the questions at issue and to draft proposals for a settlement.

The pope has sent a telegram to Emperor William and Prince Bismarck, thanking them for their support of the new Prussian ecclesiastical bill. The dispatch adds that his holiness desires the prosperity of Germany and the catholic church.

The Freeman's Journal states the government recently applied for a list of educated candidates for the vacancies in the ranks of the Irish constituency caused by resignations, and that the refusals to join the service were so numerous that the government was compelled to resort to an inferior list. Many, even of the latter, refused to take the places offered.

Mr. Startsworthy, three sons and a daughter of Altona, Pa., was mysteriously and systematically murdered. The husband prepared breakfast for the family at which coffee and tea were used. The family drank the tea and the husband the coffee. He went to work as usual and shortly after the family were all taken violent ill. A physician was called and found they were suffering from urinary poisoning superinduced by Spanish fly.

CANADIAN ART POSSIBILITIES.

What Prof. Hodges of the Royal Academy of England Has to Say About Them.

Lord Lansdowne by his individual efforts secured the services last summer of Mr. J. E. Hodges, R.A., professor of painting, and librarian to the royal academy, to criticise the productions of Canadian artists at the colonial exhibition. Mr. Hodges, in a report to Sir Charles Tupper, makes many encouraging remarks and suggestions regarding the young school of Canadian art. He says:

"What interest to the world at large, what consequences there must be in the lumber camp, the cottage of the backwoodsman, the master's wigwam; and what history they have to draw upon; the French settlements, the wars, the Indian treaties, the trials of the Hudson Bay and North West companies, must be full of striking incidents and pictorial scenes; and behind the human face there is the impressive grandeur of untrammeled nature, the primal forest, the soft-grown vegetation and the rush of waters which are impelled only by their own wild forces."

"The Canadians are beginning life afresh, but not as people have hitherto been compelled to begin it. They have good coats on their backs and patent stoves to cook their food on. I would they would begin life afresh also; not as red Indians began it on buffalo robes, but with all the great examples before them available tubes duly labelled. I should like to see Canadian art Canadian to the backbone, remaking me or of Patrick Nasmyth or John Constable or of French impressionists; this developed by nature in a special soil and climate like a prairie flower, which grows nowhere else, which we import and cultivate tenderly, and whose beauty we admire, but which we cannot thoroughly appreciate or sympathize with until we see it in its native luxuriance, bending to the winds which have blown over thousands of miles of open plains, and watered by the spray of cataracts whose sources have never been explored."

Lake City News.

Bellefonte's baseball club is about to impress a first-class battery.

On Sunday last, Patrick Murphy of Derrytown, was killed by falling off a horse.

The Park nine will play the Belleville baseball club a match in Kingston on June 21st.

Residents of Albert and Johnston streets are enquiring why the work on the drain for which a contract was given out last fall is not progressing.

The new beds for the police have been placed in the station. The men are not supposed to remove their clothing when they lie down.

Mr. Horace Reyner, a Kingston boy, who has resided in England for nearly thirteen years, has returned to the city, and is staying with his brother, Mr. John Reyner. Young Mr. Reyner is a musician and an organist of more than ordinary ability. He intends residing permanently in Canada.

Personal Paragraphs.

General Strange has returned to the city for a short stay.

Mr. J. Campbell Strange, of the ocean mail service, is in the city.

Dr. Anderson will practice in his old home, Winchester Springs.

Mr. R. Christie, inspector of public charities, and Mr. Kivas Tully, provincial architect, are in the city inspecting the two asylums.

A Girl Poisoned.

Philadelphia, April 29.—Annie Easton, aged 18, who claims to live in New York, was found on the street by the police yesterday morning and in a semi-conscious condition. She married a man named John Moore a few days ago, and says he took her to a house yesterday and gave her drugged beer. Concealed in the girl's bosom was a piece of paper, on which was written: "Nobody knows me, and nobody ever will. So good bye. I committed suicide by taking poison." The girl denies having written the note, and the girls have stolen a number of horses and killed several head of cattle in this vicinity.

Death of Mrs. ...

This morning the following larger subscriptions were given towards Queen's increased endowment:

John Carruthers, $1000.
Richardson & Sons, $1000.
The Western Folger, $1000.

W. Nash, $1000.

Jas. Swift, $1000.

It is understood that further subscriptions were obtained this afternoon, one of which is $2,000. Some think that Kingston's contributions will be $80,000.

Subs. &c. start.

For Planting.

Preserve your furs and clothing by using Cedar camphor. For sale only at the City drug store, by H. W. Curtis & Co.

Death to Metas.

Preserve your furs and clothing by using Cedar camphor. For sale only at the City drug store, by H. W. Curtis & Co.

MISS EASTLAKE.

Wilson Barrett's Leading Lady—An Actress of Merit.

Last evening Miss Eastlake, as Mr. Barrett's leading support, performed in "A Clerical Error" and "Chatterton." She was suffering from a bad cold, and therefore did not appear to her best advantage, but her acting was realistic, indicating culture, and she received warm applause. Her costumes were particularly attractive, and the characters which she represented did not seem commensurate with her recognized abilities.

Like Mr. Irving, who owes much of his success to that intangible actress, Miss Eastlake, who, although she does not possess the range of expression found in her older rival, is, nevertheless, a most wonderful woman. In addition, she is young, barely over twenty-six, and is the happy possessor of a beautiful and expressive face. She is slender built, and has an original type of beauty. In dress she is slightly aesthetic, but in attitude stops short of the angularity displayed by the disciples of the beautiful. In short, she is a woman with a marked character of her own. In her acting there is no self-consciousness, no simpering at the stalls—an evil habit acquired by so many English actresses. She forgets herself entirely in her part, and, as a consequence, the audience identify her with the character she represents. She is strongest in dramas of the emotional class, and an irresistible, if not titillating, sweetheart is an inseparable feature of the success of "Hoodman Blinde," Barrett's great play, to Miss Eastlake.

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRCTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a measure like that before parliament, excepting in the discussion of the proposed bill, which is intended to suppress crime; that it was directed against combinations; now the government said the measure was not aimed at combinations."

Maurice and Timothy Healey placed 79 additional amendments to the first clause of the bill.

JOHN BRIGHT ON CORRECTION.

London, April 29.—Mr. Bright has written a letter, in which he says: "No government, liberal or conservative, is likely to promote a