STENOGRAPHERS IN SESSION

What They Did at Their Meeting on Round Island-Rapid Writing. At the session of the stenographers on Round Island, Mr. Dement, who had come from Chicago to contest for the $50

gold medal offered by Mr. Little, of R. chester, took his second test for the prize. Mr. Little had made two challanges upon very different terms. The conditions for the first were these: 1,250 words must be written in five consecutive minutes, and they must be read back correctly or accurately. The terms of the second were more severe and stringent. They required 1,250 consecutive words to be written in five consecutive minutes, and read back literally. In the afternoon Mr. Dement claimed that he had complied with all the conditions of the first challenge under which he contested for Thompson's. It seems to go furthest. the prize. He wrote 1,292 words in five minutes and could read back his notes so as to give an accurate or connected transcript, but there were a few words | daily scattered here and there which he could not read, and hence prevented his trans cript from being verbatim, according to the conditions of the second chalenge There were more than 1,250 words which Mr. Dement could read, but they were not consecutive. There is a difference of opinion among the stenographers as to whether Mr. Dement's transcript would be taken by a court. The contest excited great interest, and Mr. Dement was given a second trial by Mr. Little, who was present. The medal was offered o any one, and as many as could win it according to the conditions of the second challenge. There wasn't much danger of James Crawford exhausting a moderate bank account in making this offer. At the evening sesbunchwood and all kinds of fuel. The committee having in charge the contest for the gold medal reported that Mr. Dement was the only contestant. He had made several trials, and had written more than the requisite number of words, but his notes could not be read back literally, and contained a few unimportant and or e material mistakes. The technical terms of the last challenge prevented the prize being won by Mr. Dement.

THE EPICYCLOIDAL Tis a sort of a mystical curve, A kind of a simious bend, A scrpentine swerve, That requires every nerva-

Twould nigh make a carmelite swea. To see him thus mangling the air With a sort of barbarian chop. How little he guesses the ball Can trace an acrial serew! He watches the rise and the fall

That a man to effect it can lend

He sees not the intricate curl Of the ball that goes flying apast, Nor the circumgyration and swirl, Nor the spiral fantastical twirl, Nor the zigzag refraction so vast.

Is not an uncatural sin in the regular chain of events. If the pitcher has something to say, He looks at the catcher askance, And speaks in enigmatic way-That silent patois of the play-With sentences hid in a glance

So study that magical leer, And watch every writhe of the wrist; And when in its switching career You see the ball suddenly veer. Take care of the tortuous twist.

-Joseph Daly in Judge Hanlan's Departure Amid the cheers of a few friends and ad mirees, Edward Hanlan, once champion of the world and later ex-champion of America, left Toronto, his native home, at 1.05 yesterday for San Francisco en route to Australia, where, on Nov. 6 and on the Paramatta River, he hopes to win back from William Beach the laurels which he once wore as the world's champion sculler. His wife, his two pretty little girls, his sister-in-law, Musy Sutherland, and Mrs. W. R. Biligham were also there to say good-bye. Dave Ward and Hanlan Make It up. Yesterday morning a mutual friend suggested to Hanlan that he ought "to make up" with Dave Ward, his old-time backer, before leaving town. They have not spoken for seven years. Hanlan consented, and walk ing over to Mr. Ward's office he said+"Dave, will you give me your hand; I may never return." Dave willingly did so, they shook, and neither could speak further. Hanlan said afterwards that, he went away over so much

Gassip of the Turf. The Fairfax Stable, at Sheepshead Bay, which is one of the most complete of its kind, has been sold, so report says, to Mr. Haggin, An innovation which Victoria can surely lay claim to as its own particular property is a lady bookmaker. This is decidedly a feature of colonial civilization which leaves England in the arch. Not that betting men cavy them, or get that womenkind will be tempted to follow
