DISCRIMINATION.

When it is urged that C. U. would discriminate against Great Britain, the unionists reply that the Canadian tarif already does that, and therefore those wh support that tariff are estopped from obecting to C. U. on that ground. That argument is misleading. Canada now has a tariff which is in force against all the world. Under commercial union the tariff and in favor of those of the United States | through with him with a vengeance. Under present ar rangements there is no discrimination in the proper sense of the term against Great Britain. Indeed, official statistics prove that under the Canadian tariff British exporters do better than those of the United States. / In 1873 under a low tariff we purchased from Great Britain goods to the value of $68,500,000 and six years later the value of our purchases | body, was but $31,000,000. During the same period our imports from the United States only declined from $47,700,000 to $43, of our imports from the United States The imports from Great Britain in 1886

HOW IT IS MANAGED.

When the commercial union agitators speak at a meeting, their agents never fail to send reports of the meeting all over the country. All such meetings are described as successful and "satisfactory." If a resolution in favor of C. U. is passed at any meeting, no matter whether the meeting or the majority be large or small, the wires carry the news and the for commercial union." But if, as at St. Catharines, a Farmers' Institute resolves that commercial union would not be beneficial to Canada, then the C. U. organs yell that the meeting was too small to be representative; that these particular farmers are a selfish lot,

If a meeting is held at which strong resolutions condemning C. U. are passed, the C. U. organs sometimes conveniently forget to announce the fact, as was the case with the Peterboro' meeting. The prison labor question awaits solution. which was at first ignored and than abused, the Globe, in its usual courteous style, referring to it as an alleged commercial union meeting, which "consisted of about twenty rank Conservatives, who met to pass cut and dried resolutions. There was no attempt at discussion, etc. That is how the C.U. organs and their allies carry on the campaign. The Peterboro' meetir g may have been composed of Conservatives, for aught we know. But had they "resolved" that C. U, would be a good thing for Canada there is no doubt that the Globe would have described their meeting as a great success and themselves as "liberal-minded men sho place country before party.' But they resolved that C.U. should be repudiated. Hence these Globular tears.

An interview with a tenant on the es tate of Lord Kenmare, published in Temps, of Paris, throws some light on the Lady Kanmare and the children have lived there under constant police protection. But Mr. Stevenson is not that Mind of a Conserva tive. He says he can see nothing in C. U. that would benefit Canada in anyway.

Some of our farmers are not so pros perous as they would like and as we would wish them to be, but Canadian farmers, as a class are fairly well to do. Here is the Leamington Post, for instance, saying that there is no other county in Ontario in which somany men own the land on which they live as Essex. Along the lake and river there are many well-to do farmers; and if in the newer townships, some of the farms are mortgaged, "in nearly every case the debt has been caused by the desire for more land for the boys, or to improve the land they now have."

The Cincinnati Post says that to propose that Canada should be allowed a voice in fixing the tariff under commercial union is "absurd, impossible, revolutionary. Bad as our present tariff is, it has the morit that we made it ourselves.' Now that is an intelligible position for an American journal to take. It cannot agree for a moment that a foreign nation should have a voice in fixing the taxation of its people. And that is precisely the stand Canadians should take with regard to the Wiman-Butterworth proposal.
