A BATTLE WITH BRUIN.

Young Heroes. Last Monday two young men named Clarence and William Eastman, of Kearon a bear hunt. About noon they came logging road. The boys followed the trail the smoke lifted the wounded bears rushed out of their retreat, bringing the young hunters to close quarters. The age of the animals was probably about a year, and they weighed upward of 150 pounds each. Noting the size of the game, and realizing that they must defend themselves from the moment each sprang directly on the backs of the growling brutes. Then began a lively struggle for the mastery. The boys weighed about as much as the bears, and the contest was not so unequal as might appear. Each hunter grasped the long hair near the ears and dug his heels into the flanks of his

Clarence was on a steep pitch when the struggle commenced, and after a few minutes hard work was thrown from his seat; but in falling he upset the bear, and both rolled to the foot of the incline, where the boy came out on top. The bear, caught in a hollow place in the ground, was considerably cramped, and Clarence was able to get his knife out of his pocket and open it. With that he dealt a heavy blow in the neck, which let out the life-blood in torrents. Then the wictorious Clarence turned his at

The bear could not a ivance, and William could earth who has ever used it, who will not tell not pull him out. There they hung, the bear struggling to get through, and the boy and give rest to the mother, and relie and graned over the log, his arms cramped and health to the child, operating like magic. his strength fast faiting him. Then Clarence It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and rushed up to his assistance. Removal of Foreign Bodies from Foreign bollies in any part of the windpipe | in mouth. are always serious and may be immediately fatal. The accident commonly happens from a child having some plaything, such as a bean, small marble, bead, or nutshell, in its mouth, and being desired to take it out, when, either in a hurry to obey, or possibly from its disinclination to do so being quickened by a ouff, the foreign body slipe into the windpipe and produces serious mischief. In the well-known case of the late Mr Brunel, the eminent engineer, whose life was endangered by an accident of this kind, it arose from his performing a conjuring trick with a half sovereign in his moush, and the foreign body becomes fixed in the upper part of the windpipe, or laryax, so as to obstruct the breathing, the patient becomes black in the face and falls back apparently dead. This sometimes happens during a meal, from a child or grown up person happening to bough while eating, and thus drawing a piece of food into the air-passages. Whatever the oause, a bystander should, without hesitation, thrust his fore-finger to the back of the throat and endeavour to hook up with it the offending body, and this can often be done, when the patient will at once breathe again.

If this method is not successful, the patient, if a child, should be held up by the legs and be smartly thumped between the shoulders, drop on to the floor, and the child will then begin to respire and cry; but if respiration is still suspended, cold water dashed on the chess will probably rouse it, or, if not, re-Of course, medical aid will be summoned at once in any case of serious choking, if possible; but the majority of these cases do very well without it. If, however, the foreign body is not dislodged by the efforts of bystanders, an operation will be necessary to have life, and every moment will be of im. portance. Even if the urgent symptoms have passed off and the child appears to be restored to health, yet, if the foreign body has not been found, the advice of a surgeon should, nevertheless, be sought at once, as it may still be lodged in the deeper air parsages, where it my cause fatal mischief if not

To ward off the threatened evil the father had this stronghold built and his son placed therein and carefully guarded. The plan seemed to work well. Time went on without evil to the boy until the eve of his 21st birthday. He was in full possession of health and vigour. Great preparations were made for the festal morrow which should witness the end of his probation and release him from the thralls of fate.
