MRS SCOVILLE

What she has to Say About Her Letter.

Upon receipt of the information that Mrs. Garfield had received Mrs Scoville's letter, a reporter of the Times was despatched to that lady's residence to ascertain if she was aware of the manner of its reception. The reporter was requested in a dignified and reserved manner to state his business.

"Are you aware of the fact, Mrs Scoville, that Mrs Garfield has received your letter?" asked the interrogator.

"I suppose she has. The letter was registered for Cleveland on Monday, and she should have received it before this time," was the reply.

"Then you have not seen a newspaper report to that effect?"

"I have not. I am getting very tired of the newspapers. They seem wilfully to misrepresent me and my family all of the time, in every manner possible. A paper yesterday stated that I had written a letter to Mrs Garfield in order that she might use her influence with President Arthur in my brother's behalf, which is all sheer nonsense. I get no rest, day or night, on account of the newspapers and the reporters."

Mrs Scoville looked, as well as spoke, her indignation. "You reporters," she continued, "come here at all hours of the night and resort to all manner of subterfuges to interview and annoy me, and then make your interviews as sensational as possible. A reporter came here and tried to interview me when I was so tired and worn out after my return from Washington that I could scarcely sit up, and when my daughter answered the bell and told him I was indisposed, he said he 'would write us all up good for not letting him in.' She told him 'we would get even with him if he did,' and when he wrote it up he said we and quoted my daughter's words but said nothing about his remarks to her. Afterwards, he came here with what he pretended was a telegram from Wisconsin, and tried to get in to interview me."

The reporter assured Mrs Scoville that he had not come to make any misrepresentations, and her manner became finally more unreserved. She invited the interviewer into the parlor, remarking that she would willingly answer any reasonable questions.

"Mrs Garfield declines to answer your letter. She says she bears no ill-will toward you or Guiteau, but does not wish to be dragged into notoriety needlessly. What do you think of her declining to answer your letter?"

"There was nothing in the letter that called for an answer, and I did not expect an answer."

"What was your idea in writing Mrs Garfield? You deny the imputation some of the newspapers have cast upon your motive for writing the letter?"

"I have been wanting to write Mrs Garfield for the very reason that I gave in the letter; and, as I stated in that letter, I did write her last July, but did not send the letter. I have written as much as fifty sheets of paper from which I have made drafts from time to time, until I had arranged it to suit my ideas as to brevity and proper wording. I felt it to be a duty—it weighed upon my mind. I wanted to tell her how I felt for her in her great trouble. I wanted to show her that it was not the degraded wretch Guiteau, but a poor insane, misguided boy, who killed her husband. I don't see how my letter could be misunderstood."

"Do you think Mrs Garfield would have written you in reply to you letter if your letter had not been published?"

"She might have done so, although there's a vast difference in our stations in life. She is a President's wife, while I am Guiteau's sister; but we are suffering from a madman's freak alike. Her suffering, no doubt, is more intense than mine, as she mourns the loss of husband, as only a wife can, while I mourn the loss to the Nation of a great and good man, and that his life was taken by

MY DEMENTED BROTHER."

"How do you account for the appearance of your letter in print before Mrs Garfield had received it?"

"I was almost at a loss to know how that happened until I found that one of the drafts I had made of the letter was missing. I used a great deal of care in preparing the letter, making a final third copy, which I registered on Monday. One of the copies I put away for safe-keeping, while the other was left among my papers to show some of my friends. I was very much surprised when I found the letter had been published, and, not being able to find the copy I had left among my papers, came to the conclusion that some reporter had secured the copy in some way unknown to me. Ever since this terrible calamity I have been writing all over the house, whenever I had a moment to spare. My writing materials and manuscript were in almost every room until after I had finished the letter to Mrs Garfield. I changed my room then, and began taking care of my papers. About this time some of my boarders left, and we were answering advertisements of parties who wanted rooms and board. My servant had the privilege of showing parties the rooms I had occupied, and several times left gentlemen who called to look at rooms in my library where my desk stood open and the papers upon it labeled and strewn about. On one or two occasions, coming in and finding strange gentlemen there and the servant answering the bell for someone else, I have chided her for it. I suppose in some way it was found out that I had registered the letter, and some one or two men arranged to call, and, after one had gone in to look at the rooms, the other would ring, and, while his call was being answered by the servant, the other made free with my papers. This is the theory the rest of the family advance as the only one

TO SOLVE THE MYSTERY.

It might have been taken several days before I registered the letter to Mrs Garfield, as every one in the house knew I was writing one, and it might have been kept quiet until it was certain I had sent the letter, and then given to the press, for if it had been published before I registered the letter, I should have written Mrs Garfield another. I don't know now whether I did right, or wrong, to write to her, but I did what I considered my duty. I am very tired of so much newspaper talk about our affairs."

The reporter intimated that some one had been given a copy of her letter to be sold to the newspapers about the time that she registered her copy.

"That may be," replied Mrs Scoville. "I understand that is the way the news is peddled around from one newspaper office to another."

"But it is said that you were cognizant of that fact, and were to receive part of the proceeds of the sale of the letter."

"Where did you hear that story?" she asked, her indignation being clearly manifested in the excited manner of the question. "Of course, I was not."

Mrs Scoville was also asked if it was true that she intended to write her brother's history. She replied that she had not fully decided upon that point, but it was more than likely she should do so."—Chicago Times.

A COUGH, COLD OR SORE THROAT should be stopped. Neglect frequently results in an incurable Lung Disease or Consumption. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES do not disorder the stomach like cough syrups and balsams, but act directly on the inflamed parts, allaying irritation, give relief in Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Catarrh, and the Throat Troubles which Singers and Public Speakers are subject to. For thirty years Brown's Bronchial Troches have been recommended by physicians, and always give perfect satisfaction. Having been tested by wide and constant use for nearly an entire generation, they have attained well-merited rank among the few staple remedies of the age. Sold at 25 cents a box everywhere.

Prof. Brush, the celebrated horse trainer, is in the village giving exhibitions of his skill in dealing with vicious horses.

A concert in connection with the M. E. Church will be given in Burdett's Hall on Friday evening.

An opposition High school has been started in Camden East. We congratulate the proprietor for his enterprising spirit and wish his effort every success, nevertheless the Newburgh High School still lives.

A concert under the auspices of the M. E. Church was held in Colebrook on Friday night. Mr A. M. Martin and Mr and Miss Hicks of Newburgh were present and contributed to the entertainment.

An exhibition of ventriloquism was given in Burdett's Hall on Friday evening by a travelling performer. The performance was a very good one, but was not financially owing to the door keeper's becoming "bewildered" that he was unable to tell a five cent piece from a tobacco stamp, about seventy-five cents worth of the latter being imposed on him.

Fees and Doctors.

The fees of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present. We believe the schedule for visits is $3.00, which would tax a man confined to his bed for a year, and in need of daily visits, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness.—Post.

BURNETT'S COCOAINE

Has Received Universal Endorsement

No other preparation possesses such remarkable properties for embellishing and strengthening the hair and rendering it dark and glossy. It cures baldness and eradicates dandruff.

BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS are the best.

Often Before the Meridian of Life is reached, the teeth decay. In nine cases out of ten they become carious through neglect. The timely use of SOZODONT arrests the destructive effects of impurities which have been allowed to accumulate upon the teeth. Children's teeth polished and invigorated by this salutary botanic preservative, will remain sound and white until a ripe old age, and failing teeth are rescued by it from increasing dilapidation.

A Public Meeting should be called of the citizens of every city, town and village in the Dominion, to consider what should be done to prevent the hair from turning grey—and falling out. If this important question received their earnest consideration they would unanimously decide that science had at last discovered something that would answer this purpose—and furthermore would recommend Cingalese Hair Renewer as being this something for restoring the hair to its natural colour, and prevents its falling out. For sale at WADE'S DRUG STORE, at 50 cents per bottle.

Mack's Magnetic Medicine is a positive remedy for nervous exhaustion and all weakness of the generative organs in both sexes. See advertisement in another column.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE are derived from the blood, which is the grand national source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich it, every bodily function flags and the system grows feeble and disordered. When the blood becomes impure, either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, its contamination by bile or other causes, serious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, which eradicates impurities of the blood and fertilizes it by promoting digestion and assimilation. Moreover, this fine alterative and stomachic exerts a specific action upon the liver, healthfully stimulating that organ to a performance of its secretive duty when inactive, and expelling bile from the blood. It likewise possesses diuretic and depurent properties of a high order, rendering the kidneys active and healthy, and expelling from the system the acrid elements which produce rheumatic pains. Price, $1. Sample bottle, 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—During every break of wintry weather exertions should be made by the afflicted to recover health before unremitting cold and trying storms set in. Throat ailments, coughs, wheezings, asthmatical affections, shortness of breath, morning nausea, and accumulations of phlegm can readily be removed by rubbing this fine derivative Ointment twice a day upon the chest and neck. Holloway's treatment is strongly recommended with the view of giving immediate ease, preventing prospective danger, and effecting permanent relief. These all-important ends his Ointment and Pills can accomplish, and will surely prevent insidious diseases from fastening on the constitution to display themselves afterwards in those disastrous forms that will probably embitter life till death itself is almost prayed for.

A SURE BASIS OF POPULARITY.—Merit, apparent to a 'cloud of witnesses,' upon which the popularity of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is founded. Throat and lung complaints, pain, soreness, stiffness, swellings, burns and ailments of various other kinds, yield to the action of this speedy and safe remedy.

CUTS.—The best thing we know of to heal a cut or wound is to bind up the injured part with a cloth saturated in Perry Davis' Pain-Killer.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

"Ah, Si Jeunesse Savait!"

Had youth but known, some years ago,
That freckle-faced small girls could grow
In most astounding way,
To lovely women, in whose eyes
The light a man most longs for lies—
Ah, si Jeunesse savait!

Had youth but known—my youth, I mean—
That you would walk as regnant queen
Of hearts in this new day—
That elfin locks could change to curls
Softer than any other girl's—
Ah, si Jeunesse savait!

Had youth but known the time would come
When I should stand abashed and dumb,
With not one word to say,
Before you, whom, in days gone by,
I'd tease until you could but cry—
Ah, si Jeunesse savait!

I little dreamed in those old days
Of undeveloped winning ways
To wile men's hearts away—
When, wading in the brook with you,
I splashed your best frock through and through—
Ah, si Jeunesse savait!

Your pretty nose—ah! there's the rub—
I used to laugh at once as 'snub,'
Is now nez retrousse;
Upon the one time brown bare feet
You wear French kids now, trim and neat,—
Ah, si Jeunesse savait!

The brief kilt-shirt, the legs all bare,
The freckled face, the tangled hair—
These things are passed away;
You are a woman now, full grown,
With lovers of your very own—
Ah, si Jeunesse savait!

You'd plead to be my comrade then,
With tearful big brown eyes—Ah, when,
My winning, winsome May,
Will words like those your lips atween
Come back again? No more, I ween!
Ah, si Jeunesse savait!

Time turns the tables. It is meet,
Dainties, that I here at your feet
Should feel your sceptre's sway—
Should know you hold me 'neath your heel—
Should love you, and should—well, should feel:
Ah, si Jeunesse savait!

A. C. GORDON, in The Century "Bric-a-Brac."

AGGIE'S DREAM.

"Do you believe in dreams?" you ask me. Well, I say "No," and I say "Yes," in the same breath, for though mince pie or strong coffee swallowed late in the evening have given rise to the most terrible nightmare visions, and one can generally trace the most peculiar dreams to something that has occurred, or to something one has read or talked of, there are still dream experiences in every body's life that are at least peculiar, and if we are to believe either history or the Bible, we must agree that some dreams have "come true." However, I do not intend to declare my opinion on the subject. All I shall do is to tell you about Aggie's dream.

Aggie is my cousin, and she is the mother of twin girls, Minnie and Tinie, christianed Erminia and Christina. She had lost her first child, and it had made her more than usually anxious about these. So that although we had for years been very anxious to "camp out" in the Adirondacks for a few weeks, the project had inevitably ended in talk, until one summer, Tinie and Minnie being eight years old, their mother decided that it would be quite safe to leave them with their paternal grandmother for a month, and the trip was at last decided on.

Off we started one bright morning, as happy a party as you might wish to see, all young, all healthy, and all impressed with the idea that to camp out in the Adirondacks was only the next thing to being translated to Paradise. And now, as I suppose you all feel, my dears, I have a glorious chance to enter into a description of "camping out on the Adirondacks." I can fancy an article at least thirty pages long, written in the finest style, and full of sunrises, sunsets, moonlights, and hair breadth escapes, but I forbear. Of course, it was great fun fixing our tents and cooking our meals for the first few days. Of course we were surprised to find that spring mattresses were more comfortable than hay beds; that there were mosquitos on the mountains; also certain big shell-backed insects, that clicked as they walked, and were not pleasant bed fellows.

Of course one or two of us were lost in the woods, and had to be hunted up with torches and blowing of horns. Of course a "guide" presented himself, and frightened us by a description of the terrors of our situation into engaging him, and became thenceforth an incubus upon the party; and, of course, there came a morning when the sky was black, the air chilly, the camp soaked in a heavy mist, that finally turned into a driving rain, and made us all wish ourselves at home again. But we were all gayer than ever when the air cleared, the sun shone, and the camp fires burned brighter again; and we were enjoying ourselves very much, when one morning Aggie appeared at the breakfast board with a face as long as the mush ladle, and announced the fact that, "whatever the rest did, she must go home."

"Why?" cried a chorus of voices. Then came individual questions.

"Sick?"

"Tired of it?"

"Find a frog in bed last night?"

"Afraid of another rain?"

To all these questions Aggie only shook her head.

"I have a very strange reason," she said. "But you must promise not to laugh at me." Of course we all promised.

"It's a dream," said Aggie. "Last night, after I had been asleep sometime, I thought I waked, and looking out through the side of the tent, saw old black Dinah, who used to live with Henry's mother, sitting on the grass outside. She was dressed just as she used to be, and I forgot that she was dead. I held out my hand.

"How do you do, Dinah?" I asked.

"Missus must excuse me," she said. "Spec Missus don't remember old Dinah dead. Couldn't shake han's nohow—might kill Missus—and I come here to do some good, ef I kin, only Missus mus' believe me.'

"Very well. I'll believe you, Dinah. You've altered if you do not speak the truth," I said; and felt not the least fear, the old woman was so natural in her plaid handkerchief and big white apron.

"Very well, Missus," said Dinah. "Go home and take care of your chillun. That's all I's come to say. Ef you don't go you'll not have any by Saturday. Gracious! how careless folks is! Why didn't dey throw away dat ar blue jar?"

"And so," said Aggie—"so I'm going home."

"Because of a silly dream like that?" cried I.

"It may be silly," said Aggie's husband, "but I think as Aggie does; we must go."

We had promised not to laugh, and we did not do so. We were, in fact, almost too angry. Henry and Aggie departed before noon, and we indulged in many sarcasms on their folly after they were gone. If anything were really the matter, Aggie promised to telegraph to the nearest station at once; but no message came, and we felt assured that she was ashamed of her folly and very repentant. We began indeed to feel sorry for her and sorrier for Henry, who was enjoying his holiday so much. When at last some one who had been to the office brought up a letter, we all clustered about its recipient to listen to its contents. We seated ourselves, laughing, expecting nothing but a candid confession of folly.

This, however, was the letter:

"MY DEAR FRIENDS AND RELATIVES—"

"Solemn," said the reader, pausing. Then going on:

"How are you enjoying yourselves? I should be very glad to be with you this bright evening—

"I knew it," commented the chorus.

—"But oh! how glad I am that I came home—how glad you will be when I tell you my story. I reached mother's about tea-time, found her and all the family well. The children in the best spirits, and rosy as apples. Was well scolded for my hasty belief in signs and omens and awful warnings, and felt half ashamed of myself. Yet I dared not let the children out of my sight. I asked questions. They had seen a snake, but only a harmless little thing, I was told. Minnie was lost for half an hour, but some neighbours would have been sure to find her. I told mother my dream, and, as we talked it over, one thing came out.

"The room that used to be poor old Dinah's had been never been used as a sleeping room since her death and the children had made a play room of it.

"'Perhaps,' mother said, 'if people were like themselves in the other world, Dinah did not like the upsetting of her room and the rumaging among her possessions'—bundles of old handkerchiefs, bunches of herbs, bags of seeds, patches intended for a quilt—goodness knows what—but all in neat order.

"The children liked the bright carpet, the Turkey red curtains and spread, and the coloured prints on the wall. They called it their little parlour, and they were going to have a tea party that next afternoon.

"'Little Sally and Becky are coming,' said Tinie, 'and we've got lots of things to play with; but Minnie broke the sugar basin.'

"'But we found another,' said Minnie.

"'It was on a shelf,' said Tinie, 'and it had sugar in it already; only my set is white, and it is blue. We'er going to make tea, and grandma says we can have milk.'

"'Blue,' said I, and the words of my dream came back to me: 'Why didn't they throw away the blue jar?'

"'Let mamma see your new sugar-basin,' I said. 'Let us go and look at it.'

"With my laughing babies by the hand I climbed to the garret. There sat the little table all ready, and on its tiny Japanese tray a little tea pot and milk jug and a small blue jar. I lifted the lid. It was full of a white powder very like powdered sugar to look at. Yes, very like.

"'My pets,' said I, 'where did you find this?'

"'On that shelf, mamma,' said Tinie.

"'I climbed up on the chair-back and most tumbled down,' said Minnie.

"I took the jar in my hand and held it tight.

"'Minnie,' I said, 'go call papa.'

"Minnie went and Henry came back with her, carrying her on his shoulders.

"'Henry, look at this,' I said. 'Look and tell me what it is. The children think it is sugar. They had it ready on the table to put in their tea.'

"You know Henry is a very good chemist, and has no difficulty in giving the right name to any drug. He took the jar in his hand and emptied some of the contents into his palm, looked at me a moment—oh! you should have seen his eyes—and uttered just one word:

"'Arsenic!'

"Poor little girls! They had no idea why I hugged them and cried over them. They had no idea how near they had been to Heaven.

"When mother heard what we had to tell her she said she remembered the blue jar very well. It was one that Dinah had had all her life.

"The garret room was sometimes infested by mice, and once she begged to have a little arsenic to kill them with. She was so careful and well-behaved that mother got her some. She distinctly recalled the fact that she put it in that very blue jar with a cover to it.

"'You see you can't mistake it for nuffin' else,' had Dinah said, 'and it's safe.'

"The jar was on a shelf, and no one had remembered it when Dinah died, until my children found it.

"Are you glad I came back home? Do you think me silly to have trusted the warning? Do you believe in dreams now? I do not care whether you do or not. But I thank God for the one that saved the lives of my little girls.

"Yours, with love to everybody,
"AGGIE."

If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere. 25 cents a bottle.

Joseph A. Evans, at Clifton, N.B., thus writes to Mr Fellows: "I believe, under kind Providence, that Mr Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites has been the means of restoring both my wife and daughter, the latter from tubercular consumption. I hope the afflicted will avail themselves of its use."

To BE SOLD at Wm. David's broker store, Princess street, Kingston, opposite Parkhill's, watch crystals at ten cents each. Bring on your watches.

BURNETT'S COCOAINE

Has Received Universal Endorsement

No other preparation possesses such remarkable properties for embellishing and strengthening the hair and rendering it dark and glossy. It cures baldness and eradicates dandruff.

BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS are the best.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Few persons are so favoured by circumstances, or so fortified by nature, as to enable them to pass unscathed the sore trials of an inclement season. With catarrhs, coughs and influenzas everywhere abounding, it should be universally known that Holloway's Ointment, diligently rubbed upon the chest, checks the worst assaults of these maladies, and securely wards off more grave and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. The truth of this assertion must remain unquestioned in the face of thousands of unimpeachable living witnesses, who have personally derived the utmost possible benefits from this treatment when their present sufferings were appalling, and their future prospects most disheartening. Both remedies act admirably together.

The most conclusive testimony, repeatedly laid before the public in the columns of the daily press, proves that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil—an absolutely pure combination of six of the finest remedial oils in existence—remedies rheumatic pain, eradicates affections of the throat and lungs, and cures piles, wounds, sores, lameness, tumours, burns, and injuries of horses and cattle.

Robert Lubbuck, Cedar Rapids, writes: "I have used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil both for myself and family for diphtheria with the very best results. I regard it as the best remedy for this disease, and would use no other."
