The Daily News.

FRIDAY MORNING, APRIL 28.

"La Patrie" says that the Scotch have furnished two ministers to Canada, Sir John Macdonald and Mr. Mackenzie, it is now the turn of a Canadian, and the next Premier should be Mr Blake. This is the best reason we have yet seen for raising Mr Blake to the Premiership.

The English people, as represented by their press, are not as grateful as they might be for the resolutions upon the Irish question passed by the Canadian House of Commons. They seem to labour under the misconception that they are able to manage their own affairs without the advice and assistance of those who view matters from a point of view four thousand miles. This is a characteristic illustration of the obstinate dullness of the British mind. We may now expect to hear that Sir Gladstone considers himself as a good a judge of the policy necessary for the welfare of the Irish people, and as capable a statesman, as Mr Blake. If this presumption is carried any further we shall have to be taking away the independent powers of the Imperial Parliament altogether.

The public have been informed, originally through the columns of the Ottawa Citizen, that the British Association would meet in this country next year, and that the Canadian Government had promised to extend a hearty welcome to the members. This announcement is received with incredulity by Principal Dawson, President of the Royal Canadian Society, who has been interviewed upon the subject, and also by Prof. Dupuis of this city. It seems altogether unlikely that the event will take place, since the place of meeting must have already been fixed last year, unless the association consists of from 2,000 to 3,000 members who could not possibly come over here, and, finally, because the Association is loyal to the British islands. However, many of the best known scientific men in the United Kingdom will visit us next summer, and probably the British Association may send a deputation of its members to the meeting of our own Royal Society.

The Ontario Bureau of Statistics recently organised by the Provincial Government has sent out circulars asking for the following information:—What is the general condition of fall wheat? What is its condition on the various soils? To what extent, if at all, has it been injured by winter or spring frosts? To what extent, if at all, by disease or insects? Has any wheat land been ploughed up? Or is any likely to be? To what extent? Is winter rye grown? What is its condition? What is the condition of the clover crop, and how has it been affected by winter or spring frosts? What is the condition of live stock—horses, cattle, sheep and pigs? Has any disease appeared among them; and if so, of what nature, and what have been its effects? Was there a sufficiency or a scarcity of fodder supply throughout the winter? What progress has been made with spring work? When did ploughing and seeding begin? In what stage is vegetation, and what is the appearance of the fruit trees? How has the winter affected fruit trees? Is any considerable quantity of wheat in farmers' hands above reserves for home consumption? Is any considerable quantity of hay and oats? Are there considerable number of fat and store cattle? General remarks.

PARTY GOVERNMENT.

A number of journals, including the Toronto Globe, ridiculous Principal Grant's views of party government, and deny the results which he declares to attend it. It seems to us that there is a good deal of truth in what was said by the Principal of the evils of the party system, whether his scheme for its destruction be commendable or not. The essential vice of the system is that it divides men into opposing bands, not upon one question alone, nor upon a series of questions involving fundamental principles, but upon questions having no necessary connection with each other. Thus, that A should differ from B upon Ontario's claim to certain disputed territory is simply no reason why they should not agree upon the effects of the tariff. The argument that since men will always differ there must therefore be parties does not hold good of parties as they are constituted at present, because, if men were perfectly free from the ties at present imposed upon them, parties are constantly changing complexion would arise upon each new issue. Examples of the manner in which the present state of affairs pruues independence are not wanting. What else than party slavery could have whipped Mr. Paterson, an avowed Protectionist, into the ranks of the free trade opponents of the National Policy? What other face could have induced Mr Charlton, who a few years since so strongly denounced the haggling peddling land policy, to turn completely around and as violently condemn the liberal policy of the present Government? Men, like Mr Wallace of Norfolk, who firmly adhere to their views upon such subjects as finance and the suffrage, in opposition to those of their own party, and who have the courage to declare them, are seldom met with. Still, although these drawbacks are seen and admitted, it is scarcely probable that party government will ever be superannuated in this country. The reason is that originality, courage, and independence are rare qualities, and that to expect average men to set long upon their own carefully found conclusions, and without leaders, is Utopian. Supposing that Grit and Tory were extinguished tomorrow, what would be the result? For a short interval it might be possible to retain the fusion, but it would not be long before an issue would arise upon which some one of ability would unfurl the standard of Opposition to the Government; followers would flock about him, and their antagonism to the administration would be continued as long as the supposed issue remained unsettled to their satisfaction. There would be a strong inclination to look with hostile eyes upon every measure originating from the same source as that which gave rise to their secession, and machinery would naturally be organised to make their opposition effective. There's your party, and, whether there be the same reason for its existence here as there are in England, where it be restrained by the same wholesome influences or not, we cannot see how a better system can be made practicable. Where is a better now to be found? And, does not the absence of any such show that partisanship is the outcome of human nature?

PROVINCIAL SYNOD.

The House of Bishops Want the Election Bishop Postponed.

Yesterday the following message was sent from the House of Bishops and discussed in the afternoon at 4 o'clock:

Resolved—That this House do not think it expedient to proceed to an election of the Missionary Bishop of Algoma at this session of the Provincial Synod; but that instead the election be postponed until the regular meeting next year for the following reasons:

1—That this House are not satisfied that the spirit of requirement of the canon of Missionary Bishops has been complied with, as they are not satisfied that adequate provision has been made for the support of a Missionary Bishop of Algoma.

2—That when the late Bishop was elected, the several Dioceses had guaranteed his stipend for a term of five years, but on the present occasion, no Diocese in so far as is known to the House, pledged to contribute to the Bishop's stipend.

3 That it is expedient to await such notice of the several Dioceses at the meeting of Synods in June or July next, as will secure an adequate stipend for the missionary Bishop.

4 That an opportunity is now offered of applying to the S. P. G. for aid, and the S. P. G. for grants towards the endowment of the see in the United Kingdom will rarely if ever be obtained at the session of Synod now up; the work of endowment either wholly or in part.

5 That the Dioceses of Algoma need not be left without Episcopal services during the meeting of Synod, as arrangements can be made by the Bishop of the neighbouring Dioceses, whereby such services of other Episcopal services may be supplied.

JOHN TORONTO, Metropolitan.

Convicts Punished

New Orleans, April 28.—A white convict on the railroad gang near Minden, who escaped on Wednesday was recaptured and severely whipped. His back was terribly lacerated. A negro convict, a party to the white man's escape, apprehending the same punishment, cut his throat with a razor, killing himself. It is stated that the convict who was whipped was the prison waiter in direct violation of the law; that the State's portion of a military order by General Hancock when he commanded the department just after the war.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Nervous Debility.—No part of the human machine is more worth watching than the nervous system which daily hangs health and life itself. These Pills are the best tonics and most powerful strengtheners of the nerves, and the safest purgatives. Sleeplessness, Nausea, headache, giddiness, numbness, and many other apathy yield to them. They dispatch in a summary manner those distressing dyspeptic symptoms, stomachic pains, and furious as the pit of the stomach, abdominal distension, and overcome both capricious appetites and confined bowels — the constantly accompanying signs of defective or deranged nervous power, which Holloway's Pills are particularly recommended to prevent. Studious and sedentary habits, who gradually sink into a nervous and debilitated state, unless some such restorative be occasionally taken.

Public speakers, actors and vocalists find and state that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil relieves hoarseness and irritation in the throat better than remedies usually advertised to relieve that difficulty. This oil is not a mere soothe, since it cures external hurts, corns, sores, piles, and a variety of other unhealthy conditions.

DR. LAMSON EXECUTED.

He Makes a Confession and Acknowledges the Justice of His Sentence.

London, April 27.—It is stated that the convict Lamson verbally confessed the murder of Percy John, his brother-in-law, and acknowledged the justice of the sentence passed upon him. The Chaplain of the prison visited him in his cell-room all this evening and remained some time in prayer with the convict. Lamson was less agitated than might have been supposed, the terrible strain of the last few months having culminated in yesterday's trial, and the jury's decision was first made know to him He slept fairly well last night, and has to-day evidently been serving himself for the ordeal he has to face to-morrow morning. If he shall be executed, he will commence to-night a sleeping draught will be administered Mr Millis, the convict's solicitor, visited Lamson early in the forenoon Later his wife paid him a last visit. The interview was a most painful character, but both husband and wife bore it much better than might have been expected. Mrs Lamson, now that the worst is known, appeared to have gained in calmness and self-possession. She was unaccompanied her by a lady friend with whom she had been residing since her arrival in the north of London. The father of the prisoner has not visited his son since last Sunday, when he took leave of him in the cell, and could bear any further interview. He has now decided to leave the matter entirely in the hands of his wife and daughter to sustain them in the dreadful affliction which has been brought upon them. Marwood arrived in this city this afternoon and will pass the night within the precints. He inspected all the arrangements for the execution and pronounced them satisfactory. The convict is confined in one of the north eastern wings of the building about fifty yards from the permanent scaffold, which is situated in one side of the yard. His grave has been already dug within the walls. A similar fate awaits the man who died in Lefroy's case.

Lamson will have no steps to climb. The body will drop into a deep well. With reference to the convict's written request that his body may be buried in the prison yard, in accordance, it is probable that no such disposal of the remains will be allowed by the authorities. The Act relative to the case of law will be carried out to the letter. The execution will take place at the usual hour for two o'clock in the afternoon before Mr Justice Hughes, coroner. Immediately after the inquest the body will be interred in the prison grave already prepared.

London, April 28.—Dr. Lamson was hanged at nine o'clock this morning. He was pinioned by Sheriff Marsh and Marwood, the executioner. Dr. Lamson had farewell interviews with some of his relatives yesterday. He was calm and resigned and after watching sale, the prisoner went to a closet, virtually admitted the act, and attributed the occurrence to mental derangement. He subsequently to another confession that he poisoned Percy John, but refused to say how he did it. Herbert John's death.

The execution took place in the goal at Woodstock. There were only three invited witnesses present. The procession entered the yard of the prison at 8.55 o'clock, when the prison bell was tolling the death knell. The chaplain headed the procession, which was followed by two officials with wands. The prisoner, who maintained the same of darling was calm and composed, looked around pale and dejected and was very nervous. He was supported by two gaolers and appeared barely able to descend the steps to the platform. He was met by Marwood, the executioner, at the foot of the steps. The prisoner was barebraided, the operations of pinioning his second unfavourable He submitted without a word, and hardly seemed conscious of what was going on. He was sixty yards from the gallows. Lamson was supported with difficulty up the steps to the scaffold he swayed backed forwards and stared wildly around him. When he reached the scene, the chaplain, who appeared to be much affected, then began to read a portion of the burial service. Lamson was supported by two gaolers, and had his legs strapped. Just before the cap was all pulled down Lamson threw over with a look of intense despair. When the drop fell death was instantaneous. The drop was three feet from the ground. The body remained hanging an hour. The usual formal inquest was held this afternoon.

Liver, Kidney and Bricht's Disease.

A medicine that destroys the germ or cause of Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and has power to root them out of the system, is the right medicine. Such a medicine is Hop Bitters, and positive proof of this can be found by one trial, or by asking your neighbours, who have been cured by it.

THE ROYAL WEDDING

Marriage of Prince Leopold and the Princess Helena.

Windsor, April 27.—The ancient town, dominated by that magnificent pile of castles, presented a gay appearance to-day. Exuberant loyalty of the citizens and the citizens vied in the display of flags, mottoes and devices, although perhaps not to the extent as when the Prince Consort was married. Thousands of visitors thronged the streets, struggling to get as near as possible to obtain a footing glimpses of the procession on the doors of St. George's chapel.

Inside the chapel, which was opened to the public at 9 o'clock, the scene was very brilliant. Fitful gleams of sunshine falling through the painted windows illumined the interior, while the effect in a measure by carved oaken panels of the choir, the transoms, the hetmets, the mantles, and the swords of the Knights of the Garter. There was considerable movement in the nave, where privileged holders of tickets occupied chairs, or stood in rows on each side of the columns Tan-lim was kept by well drilled Bedfordians in their quaint costums of scarlet and gold. Among them the Garter King-at-Arms displayed a great activity. The ladies who attired guests poured in by the north and south doors at half past seven, while the organ pealed forth a voluntary. The bridegroom was received by the Lord Steward, and was attended by his best man, the Prince of Wales, in the costume of a field-marshal. Prince Leopold wore a uniform costume, and walked with the aid of a stick The Queen stepped forward and saluted the bride when she was joined by the bridegroom the whole bridal party formed in a half circle, presenting gorgeous and glowing masses of colour. It was a magnificent spectacle never seen in England except on these rare occasions. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Princess wore a wreath of magnificent and white flowers, and as she entered the choir she left the long elegant liqure, her features lit up by line and eye, she was the admired of all admirers.

The bridesmaids' dresses, which were made in London, were of the most delicate The petticoat was of rich white satin with duchess train; the bodices were of white muslin over white satin, and were full and puffed over the top of the short sleeves. Those were composed of a single small flower, arranged so that the edge formed a frill. These bouquets of flowers were on the breast, one on the centre and one on either side, united by festoons of heather and violets. The train, which, as well as the bodices, were of white muslin over satin, draped so as to form painted panniers on the hips, and then fell in plain and graceful folds to a moderate length with other garniture than plain, some gather of white heather, giving the effect of exquisitely tied bows. Each of the brides maids wore two rows of pearls round her neck, white satin shoes, and long white gloves. The coiffures were extremely simple, the hair being plaited low on the neck behind, with a fringe of small curls in front, and a coronal of the same flowers as those on the dress, with a plain tulle veil falling considerably below the waist.

A Prolific Source of Disease.

A trifling indisposition in diet may lay the foundation of confirmed dyspepsia, and there is no affect in medical science more positively ascertained or more authoritatively asserted than that dyspepsia is the parent of a host of bodily ills, not the least of which is constipation of the blood and the maladies of which that is the parent. Dyspepsia in its severer forms is, however, thoroughly eradicated from the system by Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, a medicine which only requires regularity and persistence in its use to cure dyspepsia and the many ills that arise from it. No indigestion or biliary complaint is continued in it, and though its action is at first thorough in cases of exaltiveness, it never produces griping. Like abdominal region, nor weakens the bowels like a violent purgative. It invigorates the system through the medium of the increased digestive and assimilative activity which it promotes, and is also a most efficient remedy for kidney complaints, scrofulous and all diseases of the blood, female weakness, &c.
