IF MEN LOVED EACH OTHER

The following beautiful piece of poetry was recited by the Rev. Mr. Jolliffe during his sermon to the Oddfellows yesterday - "What might be done if men were wise - What glorious deeds, my suffering brother, Would they unite in love and right,
And cease their scorn of one another.

Oppression's heart might be imbued, With kindling drops of loving kindness,
And knowledge pour from shore to shore, Light on the eyes of mental blindness.

All slavery, warfare, lies, and wrong, All vice and crime might die together,
And meet and cern to each man born, Be free as warmth in summer weather.

The meaneat wretch that ever trod,
The deepest sinner in guilt and sorrow, Might stand erect in self respect, And share the teeming world to-morrow.

What might be done? This might be done,
And more than this, my suffering brother,
More than the tongue ever said or sung, If men were wise and loved each other.

ANNUAL SERMON.

The Rev. Mr. Jolliffe's Sermon to the Oddfellows Yesterday - What the Order Really is.

Yesterday morning the Oddfellows of the city assembled at their hall, McCammon's block, and marched from there to the P. M.
Church, where they listened to their annual sermon, preached by the Rev. Mr. Jolliffe.
The sermon was an excellent one. He took his text from the Book of Samuel. 19th chapter and first three verses, in which is related the strong bond of friendship that existed between Jonathan and David. Seven years ago, when the speaker was invited to identify himself with the Oddfellows, a copy of the constitution and by laws was placed in his hands to read. Before he had completed the task he had come to the conclusion that any man living up to the principles laid down must of necessity be a true Christian.

The principles were such as were calculated to improve man mentally, morally, socially and spiritually. The grandest of all truths was laid down in the constitution - that truth which includes the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. It further taught that when the husband and father had been taken away there were still brothers to throw their protecting arms around those left behind, to shield them from

WANE, SUFFERING AND WORK.

In his opinion that was practical Christianity. God never implanted in the nature of man a principle that He did not intend him to develop. There was that in man's nature that craved for association and fellowship.
Adam, the first man, was not satisfied till God gave him a helpmate. In the early ages men made leagues among them for the purpose of revealing the truth. In the early ages when God's people met for praise and prayer, the spirit of association and fellowship was there. A great deal earlier than many supposed good men and true banded themselves together for mutual sympathy and protection, and from that time, and the revelation of ages and crash of years, many of those institutions have been perpetuated. He believed the institution of Odd-fellows would be perpetuated till the consummation of all things. The Order was looked upon in many places with a jealous eye, for the simple reason that the people had not had the opportunity of becoming acquainted with its intrinsic excellence. It was a trait of human nature to belittle everything that with its workings it was not fully acquainted. But a better day was dawning upon the world and a great deal of intolerance has passed away, and given place to more expanded and liberal thought. The people in general of today were

WILLING TO ADMIT that there was something good within the walls of an Oddfellows' lodge room. What was the cause of this change in public opinion? Some societies have sent out lecturers in their interest and have by that means been brought into the favour of public opinion. Other societies have confirmed their mode of working so as to be popular with the people, but Oddfellows paid no advocate, it has sufficient moral courage to pursue the even tenor of its way alone and on its own merits. It was called old-fashioned. That must be admitted, as it was based on the grand old principles of friendship, love and truth. It taught all those who came within its influence to bear the burdens of humanity, to be faithful to their country and fraternal with their fellow men. The question was after asked - When was Oddfellows first instituted? One enthusiast stated that it had its foundation with Adam in the garden of Eden. Others said that it existed among the Jewish priesthood, under Moses and Aaron; others that it had no existence till A. D. 55, when it is started among the Roman soldiers. Those soldiers were termed Oddfellows because they knew each other by night as well as by day. Others say it

SPRANG UP IN SPAIN.
In the sixth century, others that it began in Portugal during the seventh century. One claimed that it had its origin in England in the fifteenth century, so that it was very difficult to come to a conclusion in this connection. The first lodge in Canada was started in 1816, but it soon died. In 1818 the Order was resurrected, but it died again. The following year another lodge was inaugurated, and since that time the Order has survived, and its cause has been upward and onward, because of its adaptation to the various wants of man. It presented a broad platform upon which all might concentrate their energies for the good of the common race. It was not claimed that the Order was strictly religious, but Oddfellowship is the handmaid of virtue and religion. The years of depression that had just passed over were enough to try the full strength of the Order, yet through those years the circle of Oddfellows had widened, and the fund for the benefit of widows and orphans was now larger than ever. The Order was rapidly taking

A FRONT RANK
among the philanthropic institutions of the day. The magnetic influence of the three golden links acknowledged, 1st, duty to God; 2nd, patriotic devotion to country, and, 3rd, unwavering attachment to the great principles of the order, which had a wider power for good to-day than ever before. He (the speaker) believed that its power would yet be recognized in every village, town and hamlet, and the smoke of its altars would go up from a thousand hills.

While he said so much in favour of it, he did not lift it up higher than the Church of God. He believed the Church was above all institutions, but Oddfellowship might do a work that the Church would find great difficulty in doing. Never had the Church enough funds to educate the orphans and bury the dead. In the lodge every brother contributes his quota to the common fund, and does so without considering it a hardship, because he knows that a contributor today may be a claimant to-morrow.

FACTS AND FIGURES.
In Ontario there were 188 lodges of Odd-fellows, with a membership of 12,776. During the past year, 1,299 brothers had been received, receiving in all $17,300. In addition to this 220 widows were relieved to the extent of $8,102; funeral benefits, $2,711; special relief, $1,705; making a grand total of $29,718. That was not the best of it. In connection with the Order there was a Relief Association. Class A paid a policy of $1,000, class B $500. Last year about $12 covered the calls of both classes. This low rate of insurance was consequent upon a careful selection of lives and economical management. During the last seven years no less than $28,955 were paid out by this Association, which, no doubt, had brought untold blessings to many a family.

CRACKERS.
Notwithstanding all these good works there were crackers raising objections. The first objection put forth was that of disloyalty to the state. There was no ground for such an objection. Others say, "We do not believe in secret societies anyway; if there is any good in them, why don't they tell us." It was the rankest kind of presumption to suppose that the thing must be evil, because it was not revealed to the world, and because it might be above one's comprehension.
Others said Oddfellowship was calculated to make men skeptical. That was the grandest mistake ever made, for a man cannot cross the threshold of an Oddfellows' lodge until he expresses his belief in God; he must regard the Almighty, as the great authority of his existence. Oddfellowship not only teaches the golden rule - the duty of loving fellow man - but the higher duty of the love and worship of God.

UNWORTHY MEMBERS.
Again it was said by some that there were unworthy members among the Oddfellows.
The speaker admitted that such was the case, but if such an argument were to prevail, all the churches in the city might as well be closed up at once, because there were some in spite of all that God revealed, and who were unworthy members. They were exceptions, however, and not the rule.
When a man entered an Oddfellows' lodge he was not taking a leap in the dark; the constitution was given him beforehand to approve of. Any grips or passwords that were used were merely to guard against imposition. He had met the objections against Oddfellowship because he thought it was the greatest favour he could do for it, and he hoped the result would be the rapid increase of membership in the Kingston lodges.

TRUE FRIENDSHIP.
True friendship was practical sympathy in time of distress. The speaker here referred to the friendship of Jonathan and David, and hoped that to the friendship that should exist among Oddfellows. It was not sufficient that the members should be faithful to this obligation, but after loving the common brotherhood, they should love God above all.

SOME ADVICE.
When a man entered a lodge, he should not think how he could be benefited himself, but how he could benefit others. Odd-fellowship did not consist in promising, but in performance. Some make Oddfellowship their Bible, their Church, their everything, but these should be persuaded that the Bible taught otherwise. Every member owed a duty to God, and he failed unless he performed it. They should discharge their duty in such a manner as to at last win the approbation of Him who delights to say, "It is well done." The speaker closed a short but time peroration with a hope that the time of universal brotherhood would be hastened.

A London Druggist says: "During that gave such general satisfaction, or for which there was such a large sale, as there is for Mack's Magnetic Medicine, advertised in another column of your paper."

GOSSIP
ABOUT TEA.

The Tea shrub is an evergreen plant of small size (less than a man's height), whose root resembles that of a Pear Tree, and whose flowers are much like those of our Wild Rose.

Its leaves were first introduced into Europe by a Dutch merchant in the year 1610, and nine years afterwards it was introduced by one Thomas Garway in Exchange Alley, London, who recommended it for the cure of all physical ailments.

The Japanese grind their Tea into a powder, some of which is placed into a cup, which is then filled with boiling water, and, after remaining thus a little while, it is consumed without either cream or sugar.

The astonishing total of more than 100,000, 000 pounds is now consumed in Great Britain annually. Unhappily, however, it is not all pure Tea, and much of even the real tea leaf is comparatively worthless.

SUCHONG means a small, good thing.
HYSON is so called from the name of the merchant who first sold it to Europeans.

There are annually three gatherings of Tea - the first in March, the second in April, and the third in August. The first gathering is the best, when the leaves are young, tender, juicy, and retain
