

Liberal Conservative Candidates
In the District for the HOUSE OF COMMONS

The Daily News
MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 12
A BLENDING ORGAN.

The Wage had an article with the above caption in Saturday's issue. The leading was a good one, but the general impression was that it did not place the phrase as a heading to the whole paper instead of using it only with a single article. The reason may be that an article of this kind is not a heading to the whole paper, but it is a strain upon a man's ability to believe that a mere blunder could be made in the determination of such a matter as the insertion of a heading, and no man of any standing would be so careless as to do so.

It is said that Mr. Allen, the first candidate in London, is likely to retire before election day. The Wage's article on the Income Tax Income was written by someone entirely ignorant of the facts and not worth reading. ing, we are compelled to pronounce this an absolute fabrication. What can our readers think when we tell them that three were killed in the explosion of the boiler at the works in Kingston, even had the boiler been blown in Montreal? This is an incredible story, and it is not possible for anyone who is cognizant of the circumstances. The plant and machinery would have remained here, the work would have been done, and the boiler would have been blown in the west end of Kingston. Such are the grounds on which it is claimed that Mr. Gwynne's article is a fabrication.

As a National Policy meeting in Toronto on Tuesday night, the speaker was a man of high standing, and his address was a most interesting one. He spoke of the importance of the National Policy, and of the need for a strong and united Canada.
